ALBURTIS (Berks Co.) — "Steve and I were always taught to be good stewards of the land that God has blessed us with. We want to do our best in taking care of it," said Steve's wife, Darleen Burkholder.

The Burkholders, owners and operators of "Greater Vision Farms," a 450-head farrow-to-finish hog operation, recently received recognition as recipients of this year's Environmental Steward award.

The award is one of four given to U.S. hog producers from the National Pork Producers Council. (Turn to Page A20)

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — Students of this week's Veal 101 seminar had the opportunity to experience stages of veal farming from farm to processing, marketing, and even cooking.

Sponsored by the American Veal Association, an organization based at the Pennsylvania Beef Council in Harrisburg, and conducted in cooperation with Penn State University, the seminar ran from Sunday to Tuesday.

According to organizer Michelle Cornman, veal programs director at the Pennsylvania Beef Council, the goal of the event is to "give an overall perspective of the veal industry from the farm to the plate.

"We wanted to show the production side and eliminate misconceptions and myths about how veal calves are raised," said Cornman.

Another purpose of the program was to have students com-

Daily National Grain Market Summary

St. Joseph, MO

Report Supplied By USDA

Daily National Grain Market Summary

Wheat bids steady to 15 cents higher. Corn 1 to 6 cents higher. Sorghum 2 to 14 cents higher. Soybeans 3 to 7 cents higher. Export news, coupled with troublesome harvest weather in the eastern Corn Belt, have allowed prices to recover somewhat after Friday's USDA production report left some traders shaken. Bean quality is starting to be questioned as wet weather continues in the Corn Belt. The fact that the Southwest Plains and China remain dry, and Brazil is receiving too much rain, is adding support to the wheat market. But with winter wheat drilling moving along at record paces, and little signs of freeze damage, it is going to take more than rain to allow the wheat market to fully re-cooperate. There is still a lot of uncertainty in the commodity markets as more Anthrax victims were treated today, leading to pressure at home and overseas.

THE OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC
THIS WEEK WITH
OCTOBER 22-28, 2001
ST. CRISPIN, OCT. 25

SOGGY SAINT SIMON

"St. Simon is never dry" states one bit of weather lore for this saint's day, usually celebrated on October 28 but falling on Monday October 29 this year so as not to fall on Sunday. This day was anciently accounted as certain to be rainy, reads another account. In 1987 the weather lore proved right for St. Simon's Day when Vermont, eastern New York and northern New Jersey all saw flooding. Thunderstorms in the San Joaquin Valley in California marked St. Simon's Day there. The Old Farmer's Almanac weather rhyme for the end of that month read: "Cover your keister, another Nor'easter! Treat first, then tricky, tricky!" Above normal precipitation had been predicted for the northern New England states.

To talk of the weather, it's nothing but folly.
—Scottish saying

A Diligent But Optimistic Concern

Last week in the paper, on page A28 under the headline "FBI Alerts Pesticide Dealers," the FBI notified the state ag department of the importance of reporting suspicious sales of or attempts to purchase and/or use pesticides.

We have been practically inundated with mail from all sorts of places that are pointing out pesticide security tips (one from Colorado State University) and how agribusinesses and farmers are urged to enforce security measures since the Sept. 11 attacks (including a news release from the Ohio State University).

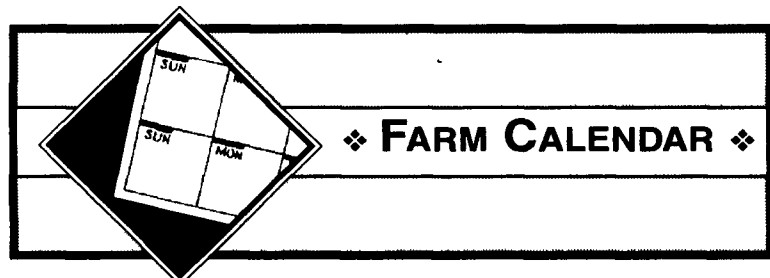

The Ohio State release of Oct. 5 noted that a "consortium of U.S. organizations, including the Environmental Protection Agency, is encouraging individuals and businesses to enforce a variety of security measures."

In a release Oct. 11, the National Farmers Union proposes a biosecurity task force in a letter to U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Ann M. Veneman. This task force is to protect the nation's food system, in light of recent scares.

An article in our local newspaper pointed out that the emergency management agencies sometimes receive "suspicious activity" reports. What exactly IS suspicious activity? In some cases, just seeing lights on late at a neighbor's house, or unexpected vehicles show up in someone's driveway... those kinds of things are a bit much and verge on the paranoid.

I think this is a time for many businesses that sell field treatments of whatever type to keep a cautious, persistent eye out, to know and recognize customers, and perhaps to thank those who are loyal and obey the rules. But we worry about too much worry, when those concerns verge on paranoia.

These are difficult times, indeed, and the terrorist attacks have underlined the need for more information, concern, and cooperation than any other time in our nation's history.

Now Is The Time

By Leon Ressler

Lancaster County Extension Director

To Conserve Water

The United States Geological Survey, in cooperation with The Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection, operates observation wells across Pennsylvania to monitor groundwater levels.

Of the 45 wells in Pennsylvania in the network with data for September, 22 are below normal and two wells (in Lebanon and Montgomery counties) are at record lows.

Many times when we experience dry summers, heavy rains related to hurricanes often provide some recharge in the fall. This year we have not received any significant recharge from fall storm systems. While we have seen worse drought conditions in the past, these low well levels remind us of the need to conserve water whenever possible in our operations.

This requires more than just short-term responses to an immediate need. While these short-term responses are important, your operation should be evaluated to see what long-term changes could be made to save water.

With an ever-growing population and a finite water supply, water conservation is not just a drought-year concern anymore. To be successful in the future, we all must do our part to efficiently use this common resource.

To Practice Biosecurity On Livestock Operations

Earlier this year the concern for accidental introduction of foot and mouth disease caused the animal industry in this country to review and improve biosecurity procedures on our farms. Recent events in this country have now caused an increased awareness of the potential for a bioterrorist attack on our food supply.

The USDA has called for increased surveillance and reporting of foreign animal diseases. It is important that no potential case of a foreign animal disease be ignored, and even possible hoaxes need to be treated as real until proven otherwise.

Producers should check their livestock regularly and immediately report signs of unusual disease to the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, the USDA, or their veterinarians. Prompt reporting can make a significant difference in our ability to quickly diagnose, control, and eradicate a disease. Signs to watch for in livestock include sudden unexplained deaths in a herd or flock, severe illness that affects multiple animals in a herd or flock, blisters around an animal's mouth, nose, teats or hooves, unusual ticks or maggots on the animals, or central nervous system disorders.

Additionally, the USDA asks producers to report suspicious activities, intruders, or circumstances to local police or sheriff's departments. License plate numbers and descriptions of trespassers should be recorded if possible.

Suspicious cases can be reported to the PDA at (717) 772-2852 from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m., and after normal working hours to the PDA at (717) 772-2852, or any other main office phone number. After-hours calls will be forwarded to a voice mailbox, and instructions will be given for leaving an emergency message that will cause the veterinarian on call to be paged.

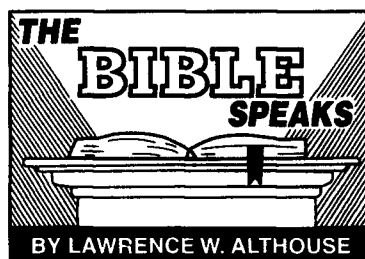

The USDA also has a 24-hour phone number: (800) 601-9327. Daytime calls can be made to the USDA Harrisburg office at (717) 782-3442. Anyone reporting a case should be prepared to provide a description of the signs of disease, the species and number of animals involved, and the location of the animals.

When a suspicious case is reported, a trained foreign animal disease diagnostician (FADD) will be dispatched to the premises to assess the situation, inspect the animals, collect samples, post quarantines, if appropriate, and take additional steps to protect animal and human health.

"Keep your face to the sunshine and you cannot see the shadows."

EXHAUSTING GOD

Background Scripture:

Luke 18:1-14.

Devotional Reading:

Genesis 32:22-30.

Valere and I maintain an intercessory prayer list that we lift up to God at least once a day. At times when, having prayed intercessorily in the morning, I wonder whether in my evening prayers I ought to repeat some of the same concerns for which I have already prayed. It has occurred to me that, in offering the same prayer twice in one day, I may demonstrate a lack of trust in God's attention to the first prayer?

So Luke 18:1-8 is a good reminder to me that we need to always to persevere in prayer. It is not how often we pray for the same thing, but how we pray.

That is what the parable of the unjust judge is about. Jesus told them a parable to encourage them to "always pray and not lose heart" (Lk 18:1). When in doubt, he seems to be telling us, pray too much rather than too little. If you are going to err, do it on the side of bold perseverance, not timidity.

In his The Age of Faith, Will Durant writes of a Spanish lad, who, persuaded he is mentally sluggish, runs away from home. On his way, the exhausted youth sits down by a well and his eye is caught by the deep furrow in a stone at the edge. A passing maid explains that the furrow was worn by the attrition of the rope that lowered and raised the bucket. "If," said Isadore to himself, "by daily use the soft rope could penetrate the stone, surely perseverance could overcome the dullness of my brain." He returned to his father's house and became the learned Bishop of Seville.

Is God Reluctant?

This does not mean that we persevere so that we can persuade God to do what we ask. It is not the reluctance of God that we are trying to overcome in prayer, but, like the Spanish lad, the dullness of our own spirits.

Prayer doesn't change God; it changes us at least, if we stay at it long enough to make a difference. What happens when this "dullness" begins to be overcome in us? It gives God an opportunity to enter into our lives.

Henry Ward Beecher said, "Prayer is not the conquering of God's reluctance, but taking hold of God's willingness." With that "willingness," God can answer the purpose of our prayer, if not the specifics of our request.

In the parable, please realize that Jesus is not suggesting that God is like that judge. Just the opposite. He is saying that if an unjust judge, who fears neither God nor regards man, will eventually respond to a persistent petitioner, then how much more will a loving God respond to us? God is infinitely more gracious and loving than any human authority and his response can only be more gracious and more loving.

Will Jesus Find Faith?

Persistence in prayer doesn't wear down the reluctance of God, but our own reluctance to commit ourselves trustfully in his hands. Persistence is the result of faith, the kind of faith Jesus has in mind when he asks: "... when the Son of Man comes, will he find faith on earth?" The expectation of easy and quick answers to prayer is not evidence of faith but sheer will. The task is not to exert our will over that of God, but surrender ourselves to his. To "cry to him day and night" means that we are not easily deterred from our faith. So, our "continual coming" is not an affront to God but a confession of faith.

But the perseverance of this "continual coming" is motivated, not by the arrogance of getting from God what we want because we are deserving, but by a genuine humility that has convinced us that we are not worthy, but dependent upon his grace. Persistence in prayer, therefore, must be coupled with humility. Otherwise our persistence may be nothing but arrogance, an assumption that we can exhaust God's resolve.

Our problem is not that we ask too much or too often of God, but that we ask too little and too infrequently. Our persistence cannot exhaust God, but our self-righteousness does. So, like the tax collector, we must persevere in our prayer, because we know that we are sinners dependent upon God's mercy and willingly commit ourselves to his grace.

"WAFFLE SLAT"
Syrri-Con Corporation

"The biggest benefit is the labor savings."

"In my previous barn, I scraped two times a day; and I was tired of it, not to mention the danger to the cows if a cable snapped. I thought I would not be able to justify the additional cost until my builder suggested a design change which brought the cost down relatively close to the original design. The biggest benefit to me is the labor savings. Two people can handle all the chores for our herd. I save money not only on labor but also on repairs."

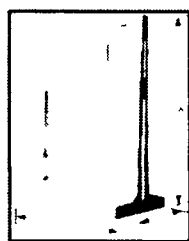

The cows' hooves are healthier, and they show heat better because they are not afraid of slipping. During the five years with slats, I have not lost a single heifer from slipping. The cows stay much cleaner, even with my misting system for cooling them. The water has a place to escape."

- Raymond Good
Good's Dairy Farm

"My only regret is that I wish I had made the pit under the barn deeper."

Weekly Dairy Market Outlook

Ken Bailey
Penn State

Oct. 13, 2001

Markets Reacting To More Milk, Less Demand

- CME cheese prices crashing.
- CME butter prices stabilize.
- Milk and component levels rebounding.
- Demand is off in the short term.

What a difference a month can make! Block cheese prices at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange during the middle of September were $1.72 per pound. On Friday, Oct. 12, blocks closed at $1.27 per pound. Grade AA Butter prices during the middle of September were at $2.18 per pound. On Oct. 12, Grade AA butter at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange closed at $1.45 per pound.

What's going on here?

The answer is the dairy industry is now fundamentally driven by supply and demand. And those conditions can change dramatically from one week to the next. So here's what's happening this week.

There are reports that the milk supply is rebounding, particularly in the Northeast and California. Cow numbers and replacements are still limited, but milk per cow is improving. So also are components levels (butterfat and protein). Thus, processors have more components to work with.

The drop in butter prices was predictable. Butter stocks are at very high levels. More cream is available for churning since ice cream production is slowing down. Demand for butter and butterfat has been weak this summer because of very high prices. There is a consequence to very high wholesale prices for any dairy product (it may damage demand).

Butter imports are way up. And finally, butter buyers are probably waiting to make their fall orders until butter prices stabilize. This could help prices to rebound a bit in the next few weeks.

The real worry is the cheese market. Why is it weakening? Stocks are fairly tight. Production is below a year ago. And demand, up until now, has reportedly been adequate. It is very likely that cheese prices this week are reacting to a change in demand. USDA reports that food service demand for cheese, particularly from airlines and restaurants, has been negatively affected. This will create a short-term drop in demand.

Fewer cheese orders will result in less activity in Chicago and lower cheese prices. The real question is whether this drop in demand will continue over the next few months.

The good news is travelers are going back to the airlines and the holidays are coming up. Also, the Congress is working very quickly on an economic stimulus package. This should help shore up demand.

The real conclusion from all of this is that dairy farmers today are strongly affected by changing supply and demand conditions. That means dairy farmers should seriously consider using the dairy futures markets to protect at least a part of their milk supply. Right now there are still opportunities to lock in fairly good milk prices through the spring months.

The Class III futures as of Oct. 12 are still $11.50-$12 per CWT January through June 2002. Class IV prices are about a dollar per CWT higher. If we get a rebound in the milk supply and the recession continues, those prices could further weaken. Then again, I could be wrong! One strategy would be to consider protecting a part of your January-June milk supply now — say 10-30 percent. If market conditions improve early next year, lock in more.

Environmental Stewardship

cil (NPPC) and National Hog Farmer magazine, which annually co-sponsor a contest.

In an effort to reward "a strong environmental conservation ethic," the contest highlights producers from four regions of the U.S. as outstanding environmental stewards.

A national selection committee evaluated the applicants in seven areas that include general production information, manure management, financial management, farm aesthetics and neighbor relations, wildlife habitat, innovative ideas, and an essay on the meaning of environmental stewardship.

Other winners included Maple Grove Pork Co., North English, Iowa; 3-L Farms, Optima, Okla.; and Arends Sow Farm, Webster City, Iowa.

Farm Growth

"Steve is a progressor," said Darleen. "He always had a vision of what he wanted to succeed to in a couple of years to improve and grow his hog business — that's why I named it 'Greater Vision Farms,'" she said.

After a lifetime of farming with his father in the swine industry, in 1985 Stephen bought his father's 100 sows and began incrementally increasing hog numbers.

In 1993 he purchased his family's home farm and added two barns, including a five-room, 1,500-head finishing barn expanded to include 450 PIC sows.

The Burkholders sell half of the hogs as feeders and keep half to finish out. In the future, hopes Stephen, they will expand to feed out all of their own hogs.

They market 8,800 hogs annually, which means that Stephen takes an almost-weekly trip to market.

The couple lives on a 70-acre property five miles away from the home farm that houses the hogs. They rent and own 600 acres, with 450 of that acreage in corn.

Darleen, who grew up on a dairy farm in Annville, is a full-time nurse and takes care of the operation's bookwork.

Neighbors and development proximity have brought environmental issues to the front burner for the Burkholders.

A large factory, located in view of the farm, employs more than 3,000 people, plus the highly-trafficked road running below the farm is a main stretch into nearby towns, said Darleen.

Consequently, odor control is a priority issue. By devoting themselves to learning about the industry and environment and becoming involved in odor control studies, the couple has been able to form good working relationships with the nearby business and community and keep up with the latest odor control technology.

In the mid 1980s Stephen served on the NPPC, which provided not only valuable experience but also gave him a glimpse into what he would need to do as a pork producer.

"I saw that in the future, lean-ness is what producers would be paid on, and that environmental issues would play a big role in agriculture. We talked about this stuff 15-20 years ago, and now it's here," he said.

"Agriculture is changing so much. What you do today you may not be doing next year."

To stay on the cutting edge of the industry, Stephen was a member of, and later president of, the Eastern Pennsylvania Pork Producer's Association. "I saw a need to attend meetings to learn," he said. He is vice president of the state pork council and past president of the state pork council.

Greater Vision Farms was a pilot farm in 1998 for an on-farm odor and environmental assessment program sponsored by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and the pork checkoff program. They have earned the Audit Program Seal, which signifies that their farm is in compliance with EPA regulations.

In addition the Burkholders participated in a Penn State University study addressing odor control. Also, in September 1997, Stephen became involved in the national pork board's environmental assurance program.

Odor Control Techniques

Ninety percent of the farm's manure is injected, according to Stephen. In 1997, the Burkholders purchased a liquid manure spreader complete with injectors on the back. The injection method saves $5,000-$6,000 a year on fertilizer, according to Burkholder.

Spring, before planting, and fall, after harvest, are the designated times to empty the two effluent tanks and spread manure at Greater Vision Farms. A crop consultant helps to draw up the nutrient management plan to ensure that the nutrients are most efficiently used, a job made more difficult because of the variety of the farm's manure.

The manure from the often-washed nursery, for example, is "not as potent as the manure from the finishing floor, which has wet/dry feeders," said Burkholder.

The spreader slices into the ground, injects the liquid, and covers the row immediately.

Since the sun does not hit the manure, "it helps to keep the nutrient value," said Stephen.

In addition Darleen said, "it's also a big asset to odor control."

Three employees, including herdsman Floyd Huber, who has worked there since 1993, are employed at the farm.

The employees regularly drain and replace plugs of the farm's three pits that have a million-gallon storage capacity. The operation also has two-foot pits in the building, where plugs are also pulled often to suppress odor and take the manure from out in the open.

Rooms are washed and disinfected each time the pigs are taken out of the rooms. The farrowing and nursery rooms, for example, which have a high turnover as the hogs move from one stage to the next, are cleaned weekly.

Another technique to control odor is the three to four inches of water underneath the slatted floors. Water keeps the solids from drying in the open and consequently lowers odor emission, said Stephen.

The pigs are split-sexed on the finishing floor. After they reach 50 pounds and until they go to market, the barrows and gilts get different rations.

In addition, the ingredients of the ration depend on the age of the pigs.

"The older the pigs get, the lower the protein gets," said Stephen.

Farm Appearance Also Important

Odor control is not the only factor in public perception, however.

Taking care of the farm, for the couple, means keeping the operation's appearance "neat and tidy," according to Darleen. "That is a big asset in itself when it comes to the public, your community, looking at your farm. When they see it as carefully mowed, you will earn respect from them," she said.

Then, during times of higher odor, the neighbors are more understanding and view it as less of a problem than if the farm were ill-kept, she believes.

"We want to be a respected part of the community," she said. "It's nothing fancy but it's mowed neatly. We put in a lot of long hours and hard work over the years."

Although environment is important, producing a quality product is at the heart of what the Burkholders are working for. "Agriculture has changed," said Stephen. "You have to produce a product the customer wants."

Because of the farm's consistently ideal liveweight (230-280 pounds) and leaner back fat figures, the past few years the farm has ranked as one of the top for cutability at Hatfield Quality Meats both in 1999 and 2000.

'Veal 101' Course

pare the different types of veal and what causes the quality differences, which they could do as they participated in the hands-on cutting portion of the program. A cooking demonstration allowed the students to prepare different veal cuts and discuss consumer issues.

The background and job titles of the 12 participants varied. Three culinary students joined representatives from state beef councils, foodservice distributors, caterers, retailers, and NCBA representatives.

Lorrell Kenney, director of promotions at the New York Beef Industry Council, not only enjoyed seeing the production side of veal at the farm, but also gained a new appreciation of the effort and experience necessary to effectively cut the carcass.

"It's hard work to pull the membranes off," she said. "I didn't realize the time and skill that goes into it."

Jackie Swihart, promotions director at Michigan Beef and Veal Industry Commission, came to the event to get a first-hand look at "how veal were raised, about the different cuts, and about foodservice," said Swihart. She was impressed by the cleanliness of the farm and "the very good management practices," she observed there.

Diane Byron, an assistant buyer for Penn State's Housing and Food Services, wanted to learn skills to make educated decisions about buying meat.

"I'm trying to learn what I'm looking for, with all the different cuts," she said. "I want to be able to tell the cuts apart."

Byron's views were changed during the seminar. "My impression of the veal industry was old-fashioned," she said. Once she saw that producers were raising calves for a high-end market she realized that veal calves are not just the sickly animals that would never mature anyway, said Byron.

Tom Lonczynsk, an extension associate for Penn State and Cornell, gave a presentation addressing nutrition labeling for major cuts of meat.

In 1993, said Lonczynsk, the USDA made it voluntary for nutritional labeling on raw products, a difficult task since "each cut may be a different nutritional value," he said.

A review of the voluntary program revealed that 60 percent of packers participated in labeling.

Databases, however, such as the "Genesis" program that Lonczynsk demonstrated, can process information on a certain cut of meat and cooking method and print a nutrition label. This software is often used by hospitals putting together meals based on dietary guidelines.

Earlier this month, a proposal was put out to make it mandatory, instead of voluntary, to label major cuts of meat. A few months to a year may be the time frame for the proposal to be acted upon, according to Lonczynsk.

Products may have an on-pack label or nutrition information available at the meat case.

Also during Lonczynsk's presentation participants discussed the fat and cholesterol level of veal. Veal is a very low-fat protein, according to Dr. Henning. Students also learned that cholesterol is located in the cell membranes surrounding muscle fibers, and since veal muscles are small, the meat is a higher in cholesterol, according to Henning.

However "saturated fat is a much greater factor in coronary heart disease than dietary cholesterol," he said.

The students began with a veal farm tour on Sunday to Mary Jane Shrock's operation in Milton where they learned about biosecurity, costs of feed, health records and medications, and stall systems. They also received an overall view of the veal industry from Daryl Heisey, a service technician with Real Veal Feed, Inc., who told the group about consumer concerns, hemoglobin checks and iron supplementation, and withdrawal systems.

Also during the hands-on portion of the program, which had students cutting a carcass, participants kept record of the weight of the meat, bones, and fat for each carcass to compare the end value of the different bob, grain-fed, and special-fed calves represented.

Also during the seminar participants learned about the industry's Veal Quality Assurance Program, federal meat inspection, food safety issues, the composition and structure of veal muscle, and practices affecting quality and safety grading. They were given a fabrication demonstration at the university's meats lab.

From left, Diane Byron and John Mondock, both representing Penn State housing and food service, join Greg Hnat, Pocono Produce Company, Stroudsburg, in the meat cutting portion of the Veal 101 seminar.

New Marketing Strategies To Highlight Veal

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU

Lancaster Farming Staff

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — "Veal is not going to get noticed by the typical consumer. We have to do something to highlight it," said Steve Wald, director of retail marketing for National Cattlemen's Beef Association (NCBA). Wald spoke at this week's Veal 101 seminar conducted at Penn State.

At the retail level, marketing developments in the last few years to help veal "get noticed" include point-of-purchase materials that bring attention to the supermarket veal case.

A case divider separates the section from other proteins, said Wald. Rail strips for the channels also bring attention to veal, in addition to on-pack logo stickers. "The impression the customer gets is absolutely critical," he said.

Success with the "Beef Made Easy" program, where the meat case is organized by cooking method, has helped to move the program into the veal sector. In addition, the beef program has cooking instructions on labels for the various cuts of meat.

"Even though meat is the center item on a menu, consumers rely on cookbooks or knowledge that is not getting passed down," said Wald, who hopes that the on-pack label gives consumers ideas on how to cook the protein.

While the beef program has nine labels, veal has one label that includes instructions for grilling and broiling besides including a BBQ veal recipe on the back.

One problem with the labels is that too many label may cover up the meat, which is so important to consumers' buying decisions. "Customers have to have the opportunity to see and know what they are getting," he said.

Materials displayed in the store may help to decrease the amount of printed material that would hide the meat.

Even tray color is important to sales. Industry representatives are debating whether white, pink, or black colors show off veal the best.

Industry representatives recently chose October as Veal Month. Since Columbus Day, an Italian holiday, is in October, the month was an easy choice.

Dr. Arlen Mills

Just how much manure would it take to infect your farm with Johne's disease? Or how about Salmonella? Do you think that it would take a bucket of manure, a cup of manure, or a teaspoon?

The answer is that Johne's can be transmitted from a cow that is a heavy shedder to a young calf with the amount of manure that would fit on the head of a pin. And it may take less than a teaspoon of contaminated manure to transmit enough Salmonella bacteria to infect that calf.

So is cleanliness and hygiene important on and about the farm? If you intend to prevent spreading these and other diseases about, then it sure is.

How and with what should equipment be cleaned, after being exposed to manure or moved from one facility to another? These same questions may apply to the now, more commonly seen, boot washes or boot baths. These should be used wherever anyone comes onto the farm before entering any livestock area. And they should be used again when leaving the livestock area.

Boot washes should also be used by farm personnel if they must go from the cow areas to calf facilities or from sick-stock areas back to the rest of the herd. It's best to plan traffic so that traffic does not go from cows to calves, sick to well, but we all know that there are situations when this may be necessary. That's where the boot wash needs to be used.

So what are you using in your boot wash or what are you using to clean that equipment between uses? I have two rules for boot washes:

- 1) You cannot disinfect dirt.
- 2) Dirty boot washes are worse than no wash at all.

So I tell those who ask that the first step is cleaning — and this is probably the most important — and then the clean boot can be disinfected. This same principle also applies to equipment. The cleaning may be done with only water, applied with pressure or with "elbow grease." A little soap added to the water will usually make the job easier and result in a more thorough job.

Once you have your boots or equipment clean, what could you use to disinfect them? The selection of a disinfectant should be based on the job you expect it to do, not necessarily on a sales pitch or what you have always used. Ideally, select a disinfectant that is broad spectrum (eliminates bacteria, viruses, protozoa, fungi, and spores) and is nonirritating, nontoxic, noncorrosive, and as inexpensive as possible.

Chlorine is broad spectrum but is easily inactivated by organic material — dirt or manure. As household bleach, it is readily available and cheap. It can be used at 1/8-1/2 cup per gallon of water. Chlorine is quite corrosive to metal and deteriorates rubber products and cloth.

Another commonly used group of disinfectants are the iodines. Some iodine products are combined with soaps. They share most of the characteristics of the chlorine agents, including low cost and inactivation by organic matter. Chlorhexidine is a disinfectant often sold as Nolvasan solution. It has a quite broad spectrum, is not as corrosive as chlorine, and is not as highly affected by organic material. The negatives are that it requires a longer contact time — at least five minutes to be effective — and it may be inactivated by hard water.

One of the highly touted disinfectants for the hoof and mouth virus has been something called VirkonS. As the name will suggest, it is active against viruses but does not affect most bacteria. It also is inactivated by organic material and is somewhat pricey.

The phenolic disinfectants are commonly used in and about the home — some mouthwashes contain these. Brand-name disinfectants available include Lysol and One-Stroke. They are not bothered by organic material, are noncorrosive, but are not effective against some of the common infections found on farms. They also are somewhat expensive.

Quaternary ammonium compounds, often called "Quats," are available as a number of brand names. The most commonly used "quat" is a product called Roccal. Quats are not effective against several viruses which may be found about the farm, but do have good activity against the bacterial infections. Again, they are inactivated by organic material and very hard water.

After reading about these commonly used disinfectants, I'm sure you see what I mean about not being able to disinfect something that isn't clean. The bottom line is this: clean things first to get rid of dirt and manure that will interfere with the action of a disinfectant and then use a disinfectant that will kill the infectious agent at hand and is not damaging to what you want to disinfect. You just cannot disinfect dirt! —

Agriculture Secretary Announces Grants For Agricultural, Rural Youth Organizations

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — State Agriculture Secretary Sam Hayes recently announced that grants through the department's Agriculture and Rural Youth Grant Program are available to foster educational projects and activities for Pennsylvania's youth.

"We continually need to develop innovative educational programs to provide our youth with the tools they need to succeed and to keep our agriculture industrial strong," Hayes said. "Our Agriculture and Rural Youth Grant Program helps us accomplish this goal by awarding grants to 4-H and FFA organizations and vocational agricultural programs, to fund educational projects, seminars and field trips that increase awareness of agricultural and rural issues."

A total of $100,000 is available for direct and matching grants to qualifying projects. Organizations can apply for matching grants of up to $10,000 and direct grants of up to $2,500. Applications must be postmarked by Nov. 15.

A 13-member Agricultural and Rural Youth Grant Advisory Committee will review the applications.

For more information about the program or to receive an application, contact the Department of Agriculture's Bureau of Market Development at (717) 787-3181 or visit the department on the Web through the PA PowerPort at www.state.pa.us or directly at www.pda.state.pa.us.

John Falter, center, was honored for his urban youth 4-H programs in Berks County. Nancy Bosold, right, was also honored for her work in turfgrass programs for the county. At left is Richard Kauffman, county extension director.

Berks Extension Conducts Open House

30-45 minutes a day — all caused by consumers with a hectic lifestyle and their ever-increasing need for convenience.

And those changing consumer values are also bringing in a taste for ethnic foods in convenient, exciting packages brimming with new and exotic tastes, noted Dr. John Lord, professor of food marketing, St. Joseph's University.

Lord, who will also be providing insights into food marketing at Lancaster Farming's own free seminar Nov. 13 (see this page for sign-up form), spoke Monday evening at the Berks County Extension open house and annual meeting at the Berks County Ag Center.

About 150 guests of the open house learned about the transitional buying and eating patterns of the American public. Lord discussed the changing roles of household members, about decision-making when it comes to preparing meals, about the increasing demand for ready-cooked meals, and about how we have come "full circle," he said, regarding meal preparations.

Lord noted that, during the American Revolutions, meals were prepared over the fire in a bowl. "We've come back to 'big bowl' meals," he said, with the re-introduction of the crock-pot to the family stove.

About 27 percent of the men do the food shopping, but have different directives when they shop.

Lord plans to be speaking about these and other topics at the free Lancaster Farming seminar Nov. 13 at the Lancaster Farm and Home Center. For more information, see the story and coupon this page or sign up by calling Karen Hoffer at (717) 721-4416.

The open house featured Berks County products from a variety of commodity organizations. John Falter, Berks 4-H agent, was honored for 25 years on the extension office staff. In addition, Nancy Bosold, turf extension agent, was also honored for her work with Berks extension.

Gene H. Hemphill, Chairman

And Chairman Of
The Lancaster Chamber
Agriculture Industry Banquet

A pleasant experience awaits those who plan on attending the Nov. 5 Agriculture Industry Banquet sponsored by the Agriculture Committee of the Lancaster Chamber of Commerce and Industry (LCCI). Added to the agenda this year will be videotaped welcome given by entertainer Louise Mandrell and directed exclusively toward banquet attendees.

While Ms. Mandrell entertains nine months of the year in her 1,500-seat Louise Mandrell Theater in Pigeon Forge, Tenn., she also spends considerable time assisting worthy organizations. "She's a very giving lady," her staff has repeatedly told me.

My first encounter with Ms. Mandrell was several years ago when she asked whether New Holland North America, where I hang my professional hat, would work with her on a charitable program she was sponsoring in Nashville; perhaps the use of a small tractor. That was the beginning of a professional liaison that now benefits farmers, ranchers and agriculture in general.

Within months, Ms. Mandrell accepted an offer to become my Honorary Chairman of the National Farm-City Council, an organization dedicated to enhancing the links and understanding between rural and urban residents.

You're still wondering how this leads to her offering a special videotaped welcome to the Lancaster Chamber's Agriculture Industry Banquet? The fact is, on Jan. 5, then-Gov. Ridge and Agriculture Secretary Sam Hayes recognized the LCCI Agriculture Committee as a winner of the Pennsylvania Farm-City Council award for 2000. When I informed Ms. Mandrell, she suggested doing something special to recognize the fine work that earned the award.

That work included hosting eight events in 2000 to promote agriculture, contacting more than 9,000 people. Activities included the traditional events of Farm-City Days, Dairy Days, Farm Field days, an Ag-Growth Workshop, and working with township officials on the needs of the Agriculture community. For the first time, the Committee held an "Agriculture Attache Tour," to help build international trade relations.

"There is an increasing gap between our rural and urban neighbors," said Secretary Hayes as the Farm-City awards were presented to a number of organizations. "Through the work of the Farm-City program, we are able to bridge this gap."

I couldn't agree more. In the past, much of the National Farm-City Council's attention was directed toward activities that helped urban residents, especially the children, understand more about their food - that milk comes from a cow, not a fountain, and cereal comes from fields, not from boxes. The Council also helped rural residents better understand the urban contributions to getting food from the farms to the tables.

But today the message of the National Farm-City Council also stresses food safety. This is important, considering how many organizations today are challenging the safety of the food we eat, or the methods used in raising that food. Farmers have too many challenges already and they do not need to deal with unjustified challenges.

As Ms. Mandrell said, "The food on our tables is safe! It's produced by some of the greatest farmers in the world and brought to your tables by one of the greatest processing and transportation systems in the world. That's farm and city working together."

Editor's Note: To see Ms. Mandrell's welcome message, plus the keynote speech by Ken Root, speaker, writer, and past host of the nationally syndicated radio show AgriTalk, plan on attending the Agriculture Industry Banquet Monday, Nov. 5 at Willow Valley Resort. To register, visit www.lancaster-chamber.com, contact Brent Landis at (717) 397-3531, or e-mail blandis@lcci.com.

Certified Hereford Beef Seeks Feeder Cattle

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — As Certified Hereford Beef (CHB) expands its production, the program is calling on auction markets to continue to play a critical role in the supply chain.

"We've got to do a better job of communicating with America's auction markets," says Rob Ames, American Hereford Associations (AHA) director of product marketing.

"Meeting our growing demand means that we have got to find more white-faced cattle for our feeders."

At the hub of this effort is HerfNet, a marketing communication network established by the AHA to gather and report feeder calf availability to a target buyer audience. The weekly report is available online at www.HerfNet.com and is faxed to 51 feedyards who supply CHB. Most listings are made through the web site or by a toll-free call to (866) 437-3638.

HerfNet is designed to capture information on all Hereford-influenced feeder cattle. Last year, the free service listed 32,000 head of calves and yearlings available through 60 auction markets in 16 states.

In addition, 37 sale barns hosted special feeder calf sales, which load lots of Hereford, and baldy calves are gathered for the growing audience of CHB buyers.

To participate, auction market managers simply phone, fax or mail information about cattle in their barn to the HerfNet operator. The data they provide is entered into a database, formatted, sorted and redistributed to those target feeders and order buyers looking for Hereford-influenced cattle.

While each set of cattle and contact information is listed on the Internet at HerfNet.com, that particular technology is only a part of the HerfNet system.

AHA staff verbally contacts weekly with many of the feedlots that supply CHB and plans to aggressively market cattle in the HerfNet database to those feeders who can assure that CHB can grow larger in the future.

According to Ames, CHB maintains a weekly harvest of 1,800 head of Hereford and baldy cattle. To significant growth entails feeders' ability to deliver 3,000 head of eligible cattle every week in the year.

For more information on CHB or HerfNet, please contact Rob Ames at (816) 842-3757.

Denver To Host 2002 Cattle Industry Convention, Trade Show

DENVER, Colo. — Beef producers across the country are being encouraged to "Ride for the Brand" and take the reins of their industry by participating in the 2002 Cattle Industry Convention and Trade Show in Denver, Colo., Feb. 6-9.

The "Ride for the Brand" theme represents the combined effort of beef producers who belong to numerous organizations to create a stronger, more unified and aggressive industry. Annual meetings of the Cattlemen's Beef Promotion and Research Board, the National Cattlemen's Beef Association, the American National CattleWomen, Inc. and Cattle-Fax will be held at the event.

About 5,500 people from all over the U.S. are expected to attend the February convention and trade show. It will feature not just meetings of the respective organizations, but educational programs and entertainment to provide opportunities for professional growth and broadening social contacts.

For instance, the always-popular "Cattlemen's College," sponsored by Pfizer Animal Health, will give producers ideas for creative and profitable ways of improving their operations. In addition, more than 300 exhibitors will be showing their services and products at the annual NCBA Trade Show.

A pre-convention agricultural tour will take place on Tuesday, Feb. 5, hosted by the Colorado Livestock Association, Colorado Cattlemen's Association and the Colorado Beef Council. Among the tour stops will be Colorado State University's new Agriculture Research Development Education Center, and the Anheuser-Busch Brewery. The tour will be preceded by a reception and dinner for attendees the previous evening.

Pre-registration and hotel information for the 2001 Cattle Industry Annual Convention and Trade Show will be available October 26 through the NCBA Convention and Meetings Department, 303/694-0305.

Crossbred Tennessee Meat Goat Is Grand Champ At Manheim

Lancaster Farming Staff

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — After five years of exhibiting market goats at the Manheim Community Farm Show, Sarah Landis finally joined her three sisters in the honor of taking home a grand championship trophy.

"It's exciting," Landis said of her first time winning the show.

Her older sister, Anna, was the first to win eight years ago. She was followed by Rebekah, the oldest, then younger sister Celeste. Younger brother Michael has also exhibited the reserve champion market goat at Manheim.

The daughter of Melvin and Nancy Landis of Lititz, Sarah is the middle child in the family of seven.

A home-schooled tenth grader, Sarah also helps out on the family's 128-acre beef farm.

Sarah Landis said one of the reasons she enjoys showing goats is because of the social interactions it offers.

"I like being out in public," she said.

Landis said her champion is partly Boer as well as Tennessee Meat Goat.

The goat show posted the following results:

Breed Associations Plan Calf Sale

FREDERICK, Md. — The Maryland Shorthorn, the Maryland Hereford Association, and the Maryland Angus Association have joined forces to present the Dynamic Duo Spotlight Calf Sale at the Frederick Fairgrounds, Frederick, Md., Saturday, Oct. 27 at 7 p.m.

The sale will feature approximately 40 hand-selected Shorthorn, Hereford, and Angus steer calf projects all with the potential to be 2002 show winners.

The sale will begin with two incentive drawings — each worth a $100 credit toward the purchase of any steer in the sale. All junior exhibitors who purchased a steer in the 2000 sale and who register for a buyer number at this year's sale will be eligible for the drawing.

This past year Shorthorn, Hereford, and Angus steers have excelled very well on county, state, and regional levels. With a lot of interest in all of these breeds, hopefully, this will be a repeat performance in the upcoming year. Each steer has been halter-broken, dehorned, wormed and vaccinated for blackleg, BVD, IBR, PI3, and BRSV and must have met all state health requirements.

For further information about the sale, please contact David Bowman (301-898-5152), Ray Howes (410-775-2205), Bruce Bennett (410-775-0325).

Bt Registration Extension A 'Dual Win'

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — The National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) said U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's (EPA) approval of Bacillus thuringiensis (Bt) for an additional seven years is a dual win for corn growers.

"First, it's a win for the science-based regulatory system that NCGA has supported that provides U.S. growers with access to this technology," said Leon Corzine, NCGA Biotech Working Group member and Assumption, Ill., corn grower. "Second, the EPA's Insect Resistance Management (IRM) requirements are based on the initial guidelines NCGA helped EPA develop more than two years ago and the recommendations NCGA made during the recent EPA comment period.

"The EPA has conducted a two-year, in-depth study of Bt corn," Corzine said, "and determined that it poses no risks to people or the environment. The NCGA worked very hard to ensure that science would decide the continued availability of Bt and we're very pleased that the EPA used a public process in making its decision."

EPA's re-registration of Bt corn hybrids includes specific requirements to strengthen insect resistance management (IRM), to increase research data on potential environmental effects, and to improve grower education and stewardship.

The tour gives visitors the opportunity to see the agricultural enterprises in the central part of the county from Coatesville to West Chester.

• Allerton Farm: A working horse farm where Chester County Fox Hunting still takes place. "The hunt" will be explained and demonstrations will take place.

• Buck Run Land & Cattle Company: A farm where cattle are raised on natural pasture without hormones or antibiotics. All aspects of the business seek to treat the animals and the land humanely and respectfully.

• Highland Orchards: This is a family-run orchard business that changes with the seasons. See how fruits are grown and cider is made. There are a variety of things for families to see and do here.

• Lambert Spawn Company: The company behind the mushroom industry in Chester County. Since the area is the "Mushroom Capital of the World," come and see how the mushrooms grow.

• Stargazers Vineyard: Displays of the equipment necessary in wine making will show the process from beginning with the vines to the finished bottles.

• Tri-Color Nurseries: Get a preview of the Christmas season at this Christmas tree farm. Take a hayride and get a glimpse of the beautiful trees and learn what's involved in keeping these special trees growing more beautiful every year.

The tours are free.

Because of the current problems with animal diseases in Europe, tour organizers ask that if your family has recently traveled overseas, please avoid the farms with livestock.

There will be products available to buy at some of the stops and a lunch stand will be included. Restrooms are available at each location. The farms will be open from 10 a.m.-3 p.m. for visitation. This is a self-guided tour; one may visit in any order desired. Farm products, lunch and restrooms will be available.

Brochures are available by calling 610-344-6285 or 610-495-5529, or at any of the above farms on the day of the tour

Pa. FFA Repeats As Big E Sweepstakes Winner

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. — For the second consecutive year, the Pennsylvania State FFA was the Sweepstakes Winner here at the Big E Livestock Exposition.

FFA members from competing chapters had an overall higher placement than any other state competing, with all competitions combined. The banner will be displayed in the Pennsylvania FFA office at the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture Building in Harrisburg.

The following Pennsylvania chapters won several first-place awards: Red Lion, dairy cattle judging; students from Mifflinburg, Cumberland Valley, and Danville chapters, dairy cattle showmanship; West Greene Chapter, livestock; Walter Biddle Saul, nursery landscape; Elizabethtown, poultry; Jill Neiman, Oley Valley, prepared public speaking; and Kurtis Seiler, Upper Dauphin Area Chapter, safe tractor driving.

Since the official judge for the livestock competition was unable to attend, Paul Hostetter and Jeremy Ranck, two Pennsylvania state officers who were originally scheduled to help with this competition, filled in as the official judges for the competition.

The state FFA officer team attended the expo Sept. 14-16. Lisa Fetscher, state FFA reporter, with state officers from other states, served on the official team for opening ceremonies at the Big E FFA banquet. Cody Holden, Pa. state chaplain, gave the invocation after opening ceremonies. Paul Hostetter, state president, participated in the awards ceremony, handing out awards to event winners with help from other team members Jeremy Ranck, Holly Rankin, Becky Sankey, and Sherisa Brammer.

Hostetter was chosen as one of three state presidents to the Big E intern program.

State 4-H Horse Show Oct. 26-28

The state show is the final competition of the year for 4-H horse club members enrolled in performance and production projects. To be eligible for the show, members must advance through qualifying competitions at county, regional, and district levels.

Events include halter, showmanship, equitation, pleasure, jumping, driving, reining, western riding, and timed events. A therapeutic riding division for riders with disabilities is also included.

Highlights of the weekend will include the Recognition Ceremony conducted on Saturday evening and the presentation of the 2001 Pennsylvania 4-H Horse Program Outstanding Member Awards. A saddle will be awarded to the winner of this award. Finalists will be presented with halters and leads.

The outstanding member awards recognize outstanding 4-H members who are active in the 4-H horse program on a local, regional, state, and national levels. Emphasis is placed on the member's participation in the 4-H program, leadership, and impact on their club, county, and community.

The Equine Educational Exhibit Awards and Good Housekeeping Awards will also be presented on Saturday evening.

The third annual State 4-H

Model Horse Show will be conducted Saturday, Oct. 27, beginning at 10:30 a.m. in the Small Arena. The model horse show provides an opportunity for interested 4-H members to learn and perfect the hobby of collecting and showing model horses.

In so doing, members will gain knowledge of principles of collecting, history, breeds, and uses of horses, tack, and equipment, and horse shows. The model horse show is a unique opportunity for youth to participate in the state show and learn more about horses. The model horse program is ideal for horseless and urban members who may be able to own or show live horses.

A dance for exhibitors and 4-H members will be conducted in the Small Arena Friday. The show begins daily at 8 a.m. Evening performances begin at 8 p.m. on Friday and 7 p.m. Saturday.

Approximately 7,500 youth are enrolled in 4-H horse projects in Pennsylvania. For additional information on the show or 4-H horse programs in Pennsylvania, contact your local Penn State Cooperative Extension office or visit the Pennsylvania 4-H horse program Website at <http://www.das.psu.edu>. Nov. 13 Is Date For Lancaster Farming's Free Farm Seminar Preregistration Required the Farm and Home Center in Lancaster.

Along with the seminar, with nationally recognized speakers, are free coffee and donuts in the morning and free lunch, courtesy of Lancaster Farming.

"The seminar is our way of thanking readership for more than 46 years of support, and a chance to gain knowledge of the latest information in transitioning the farm and farm product marketing," said Andy Andrews, editor of the newspaper.

But, Andrews acknowledged, those who wish to attend need to sign up so arrangements can be made for seating and lunch. Use the form or call Karen Hoffer, (717) 721-4416.

The seminar, at the Farm and Home Center in Lancaster, includes registration from 8 a.m.-8:50 a.m. and the program from 8:50 a.m.-3 p.m.

"More than ever, farmers must begin to more fully market their farm products to stay alive," Andrews said. "And more importantly, they must consider strategies to help turn the operations and ownership of the farm over to their children."

Scheduled speakers are Dr. John Lord, a respected and widely known product marketing expert from St. Joseph's University in Philadelphia; Elizabeth Brown, a farm accountant from Shippensburg; Brad Hilty, Penn State Dairy Alliance, with an expertise in dairy management and marketing; and Dr. Cindy Iannarelli, Bridgeville, who operates a consultant company, "Business Cents."

Seating is limited to 400, and the seminar will be no cost to those who sign up. Use the enclosed sign-up form on page 1 and mail in by Oct. 29. Families will be notified by mail only — no names will appear in the newspaper.

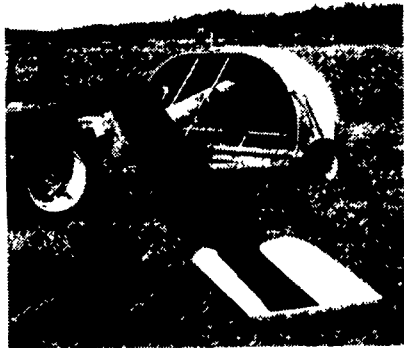

For more information or to sign up, contact Karen Hoffer at (717) 721-4416.

New Marketing Strategies

since veal is featured in so many Italian dishes, said Wald.

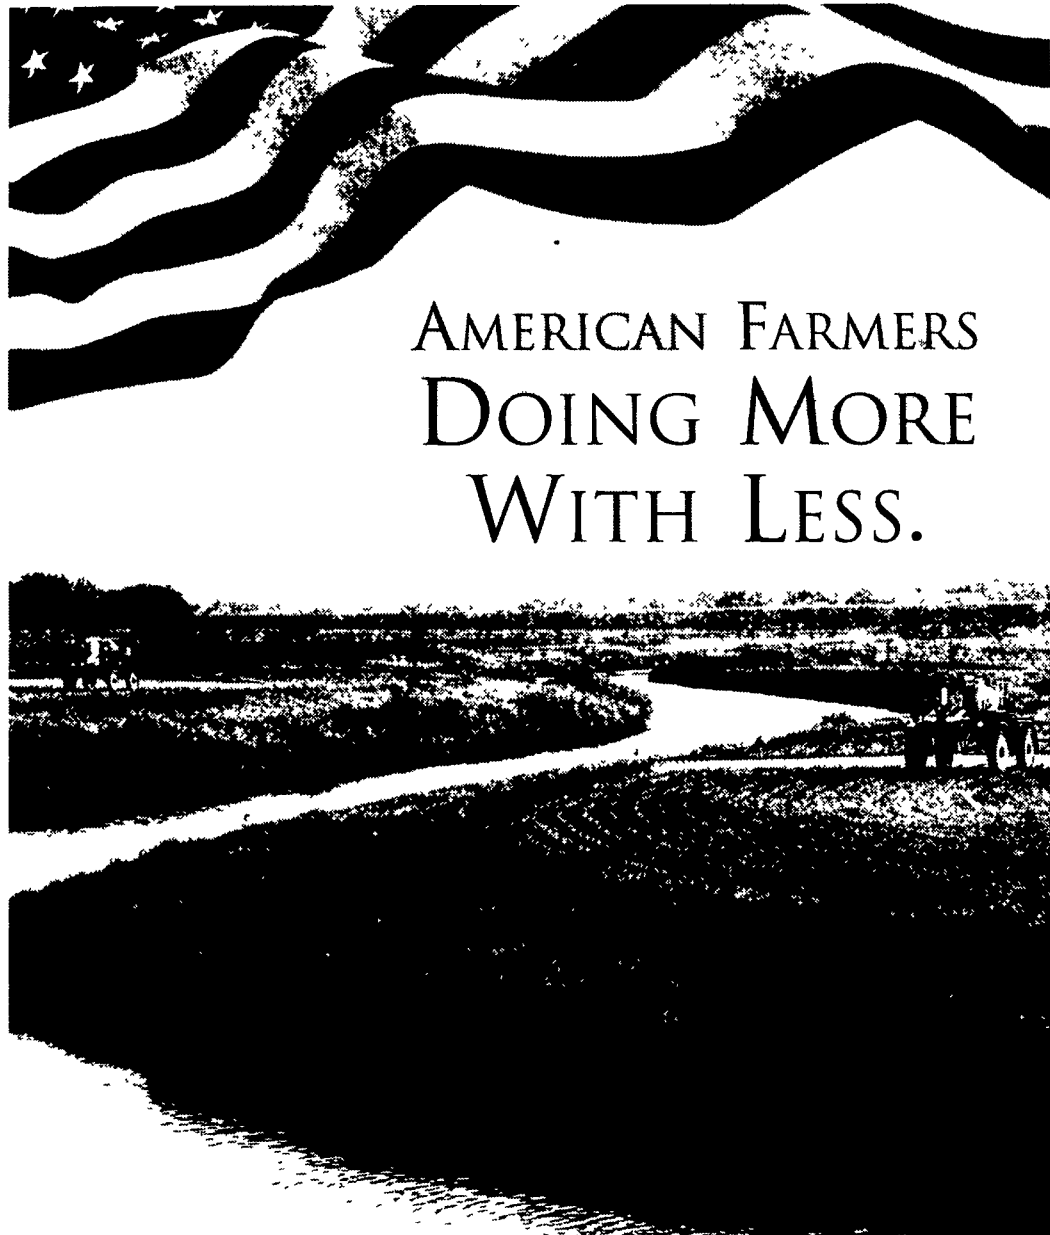

Other marketing advancements include a new brochure made for foodservice sales personnel and culinary students that outlines how to cook veal.

"At the foodservice level, color also shows the quality of product. As the veal cooks, the color variances make a lot of difference in the end product," he said. "What comes to the plate, that's the first thing that tells customers whether it's going to be good or not."

"Veal is a versatile protein that chefs can be creative with, and the same is true for consumers wanting something unique and different. Stores can also do cross-merchandising since veal works well with seasonings, marinades, and sauces."

Steve Wald, director of retail marketing for National Cattlemen's Beef Association (NCBA), demonstrates the latest techniques used to draw attention to the veal portion of the meat case in grocery stores.

Abstract

Chicken For Every Pot, Pan, Oven, Microwave, Grill

For most of us, quick meals have become the daily rule. Getting a good meal on the table fast can be a challenge for even the most accomplished cook. We not only want convenience but also food that looks good, tastes good, and is good for us, too.

Delmarva Poultry Industry, Inc. came up with some delicious, nutritious chicken — pronto — recipes.

With the help of these creative recipes, you'll be sitting down to dinner in no time. Today's recipes includes many from Delmarva's collection. For more recipes, click onto Delmarva's website at www.dpchicken.org.

CHILI-CORN CRUSTED CHICKEN

- 4 boneless, skinless chicken breast halves
- 1/4 cup low-fat milk
- 1/2 cup cornmeal
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon chili powder
- 3 tablespoons vegetable oil

Salsa

With meat mallet or similar utensil, pound chicken to 1/4-inch thickness. In shallow dish, place milk. In second shallow dish, mix together cornmeal, salt, and chili powder. Dip chicken, one piece at a time, in milk, then in cornmeal mixture, turning to coat all sides. In large nonstick frypan, place oil and heat to medium-high temperature. Add chicken and cook, turning, about 8-10 minutes or until chicken is brown and fork tender. Serve with your choice of prepared salsa. Makes 4 servings.

CHICKEN VEGETABLE STIR-FRY WITH LINGUINE

- 4 boneless, skinless chicken breast halves, cut in thin 2-inch strips
- 1 package stir-fry seasoning mix
- 2 tablespoons orange juice
- 1 tablespoon vegetable oil
- 16-ounces frozen vegetables for stir fry
- 1/4 teaspoon hot pepper flakes
- 8-ounces linguine, cooked according to package directions

In a small bowl, mix together seasoning mix and orange juice; set aside. In large nonstick frypan, place oil and heat to medium-high temperature. Add chicken and cook, stirring 5 minutes or until chicken is lightly browned and almost tender. Add frozen vegetables and cook, stirring, 4 minutes or until vegetables are tender crisp. Stir in seasoning mixture and pepper flakes and cook, stirring constantly, until sauce boils and meat and vegetables are coated. Serve over hot linguine. Makes 4 servings.

CHESAPEAKE CHICKEN WITH HERB RICE

- 4 chicken breast halves
- 1/2 teaspoon garlic powder
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoons coarsely ground pepper
- 3/4 cup water
- 3 chicken bouillon cubes
- 1/4 pound mushrooms, sliced
- 1 cup chopped onion
- 2 small carrots, thinly sliced
- 4 teaspoons dried parsley
- 4 teaspoons chopped dried chives
- 1/2 teaspoon dried red pepper flakes
- 1/2 teaspoon marjoram
- 3/4 cup medium dry white wine
- 3/4 cup white long-grain rice
- 1/4 pound snow peas

In large nonstick frypan, place chicken, skin side down, and cook, turning about 10 minutes or until brown. In small bowl, mix together garlic powder, salt and pepper; sprinkle over chicken. Remove chicken from frypan and set aside. To frypan, add water and bouillon cubes; heat over medium temperature to dissolve. Add mushrooms, onion, carrots, parsley, chives, red pepper flakes, marjoram, and wine. Stir to mix and loosen browned bits from bottom of pan. Add rice, arrange chicken on top, cover and simmer about 20 minutes or until most of the liquid is absorbed by the rice and fork can be inserted in chicken with ease. Place snow peas on top of chicken and simmer, covered, 5 minutes more. Makes 4 servings.

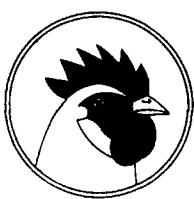

APPLE CURRY CHICKEN

- 4 boneless, skinless chicken breast halves
- 1 1/2 teaspoons curry powder, divided
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 4 teaspoons vegetable oil, divided
- 1 Golden Delicious apple, peeled, chopped
- 1/3 cup chopped onion
- 1/2 cup mango chutney, chopped
- 1/3 cup water

With meat mallet or similar utensil, pound chicken to 1/4-inch thickness, sprinkle chicken with half of curry powder and salt. In nonstick frypan, place 2 teaspoons oil and heat to medium-high temperature. Add chicken and cook, turning, 8-10 minutes or until chicken is brown and fork tender. Remove chicken to platter; keep warm. To same frypan, add remaining 2 teaspoons oil and heat to medium high temperature. Add apple and onion, and cook, stirring, 2-3 minutes or until apple and onion are almost tender. Stir in chutney, water, and remaining curry; heat to boiling and boil one minute to thicken slightly. Spoon over chicken. Serve with hot cooked couscous or rice. Makes 4 servings.

Baked chicken breasts cook quickly without the bone. Many recipes for boneless, chicken breasts offer good taste and impressive appearance for special occasions.

In response to consumer demands for convenience and freshness, chicken sales have evolved over the years from mostly whole bird to a growing variety of raw cuts and convenience products.

Today's pan ready chicken cuts can be prepared in an infinite variety of ways. They are good cooked indoors or out; served hot or cold; in winter or summer.

Although chicken can be served in an almost endless variety of ways, it provides the same complete protein as red meat—yet a three-ounce serving of chicken breast contains less than 120 calories.

Convenience, nutrition, and value makes chicken one of the most economical sources of lean meat. The right recipe makes all the difference when it comes to great flavor.

Pennfield Farms offers this quick, delicious, and easy to fix chicken that is sure to be a hit at your dinner table.

GRILLED RASPBERRY CHICKEN

- 4-6 boneless, skinless, chicken breasts
- 8-ounce bottle raspberry vinaigrette dressing
- Fresh fruit for garnish

Place chicken breasts in bowl and marinate in dressing. Cover and refrigerate several hours or overnight. Discard marinade. Cook chicken breasts on grill 4-6 minutes on each side, checking to see when inside juices run clear. Note: the chicken will be pink because of the marinade, so check carefully for doneness. Serve garnished with fresh raspberries and slice of kiwi fruit. Serves 4-6.

Dealing With Impact Of Terrorism

The acts of terrorism on Sept. 11 have directly impacted the lives of thousands of Americans who have lost a loved one and indirectly affected us all. One of the areas of people's lives that have been affected is their personal finances. While certainly not as tragic as the loss of life and destruction of landmark buildings, it is still an issue of widespread concern:

- Some people lost a spouse or partner who provided all or part of their household's income.
- Some people, who worked in lower Manhattan and elsewhere (several airlines) lost their jobs.
- Some people also lost their health insurance, as well as their job. If their employer no longer exists, they have no way to access group health insurance on their own through the federal COBRA law.
- Some people have incurred unanticipated expenses for hotels and meals while stranded away from home during airport closings or costs for alternative methods of travel.
- All investors are affected by the impact of the terrorism upon financial markets.

Below is a list of financial tips during these difficult times or any other financial emergency:

- Contact Your Creditors Immediately — If you will have difficulty paying your bills as a result of a loss of household income, let your creditors know now, before you become delinquent on bills. Tell them the circumstances that have caused you difficulty and negotiate for a reduced or delayed payment. Note the name of the person that you speak to and the date and follow up all phone calls in writing summarizing the agreed upon terms.
- Apply For and Obtain Available Payments — This includes life insurance benefits, compensation payments announced by airlines and government agencies, and payments from an employer. Also, state unemployment benefits and any other payments available to unemployed workers through their union or trade association.
- Dust Off Your Resume —

Unfortunately, for many unemployed survivors, there will not be any severance pay. Their company no longer exists. Experts suggest developing a one-page resume that stresses job skills, rather than chronological dates of employment. If you have samples of your work available on the Internet, add the Web links so that employers can easily learn more about you online.

- Seek Alternative Health Insurance — Check if health insurance is available through a spouse's employer, union, or professional or trade association. Another source of coverage, for uninsured people who qualify by income and family size, are state programs for the uninsured.
- Reconstruct Records, If Necessary — While some employers and financial firms that were affected in the World Trade Center collapse kept backup records at a secondary location, others did not. Workers whose employer no longer exists, or people who did business with WTC-based firms, may need to rely upon their own records to document their employment history or prove eligibility for benefits.
- Reconsider Liquid Assets — It was reported in the Wall Street Journal and several financial trade publications that money market mutual fund (MMMF) redemptions cannot be made when the financial markets are closed because they contain some securities that trade on the exchanges. The moral for consumers may be to put some of their emergency fund money in another type of cash asset, such as an I bond or bank CD, for increased liquidity in uncertain times.

- Avoid Knee-Jerk Investment Decisions — An already volatile financial market before the acts of terrorism will undoubtedly become even more so as trading resumes. Remember that investing is a long-term proposition and history tells us that there can be prolonged periods of declining stock prices. That is why stocks are not recommended for short-term (less than five-years away) financial goals. The stock market is very efficient and share prices generally reflect events such as this.
- Budget For Unanticipated Expenses — Add the costs for alternative forms of transportation and other unforeseen expenses to your household spending plan and adjust other items as needed.
- Reach Out For Financial (As Well As Emotional) Support — Many churches and community organizations are assisting victims of this terrible tragedy. Everyone in the country has been affected by this event in some way and the level of compassion and support is high.

Set Priorities To

Keep Holidays Hassle-Free

Believe it or not, the busy holiday season will soon be upon us. Hassle-free holidays begin by setting priorities. Unless you take time now to plan, you'll probably be frazzled by Jan. 2.

So, take some time to write down everything you would like to do or have to do for the next three months. Start making lists of what you would like to buy, and keep the lists handy so that you can take advantage of sales and unexpected shopping opportunities.

Ask yourself, "Is it humanly possible for me to do all of these things?" Then, devote time to the things most meaningful to you. Get the family together and distribute the workload.

Here are additional ideas for making the best use of time these months:

- Buy cards and stamps as soon as they are available. Set a goal to write three to five cards each night until finished, perhaps while watching television. Carry several cards with you to write during waiting times, such as at the hairdresser or doctor's office.
 - Make to-do lists.
 - Keep a master calendar of events.
 - Schedule parties back-to-back and take advantage of the clean house, doubled recipes, etc.
 - Don't do major cleaning before a party. Do clean the bathroom; put out fresh soap.
 - Set deadlines for completing shopping and cleaning.
 - Plan several complete menus for entertaining to keep on hand. Make things ahead to keep in the freezer.
- Families should consider all the expenses associated with items on their lists, such as gifts, postage and entertaining. Be realistic in your estimates and then ask yourself, "Can I really afford to spend that much? If you can't, explore alternatives, such as reducing the number of gifts, making gifts or giving "coupons" for services. Consider keeping parties small. Go potluck or try the non-traditional, such as a soup supper.

Families and individuals can do several other things to reduce holiday stress:

- Shop by mail. Order early and keep track of what you've ordered. Save receipts and canceled checks until you are certain the merchandise is satisfactory.

- Begin holiday shopping early, and maintain a list of what you have purchased so you don't buy wrapping paper three times and forget the ribbon.

- Live dangerously when it comes to buying certain items such as candles, fruitcakes and other specialty items. Often, they go on sale a day or two before the holiday. You may be able to save money by waiting.

- After the holidays, take advantage of sales to stock up on decorations, gift-wrap, ribbon, cards and other items that can be stored until the following year.

Keep Spending In Perspective While Holiday Shopping

As pleasant as the holiday season can be, for some it often becomes a high time of stress and unrealistic expectations, especially when it comes to gift giving. Keep the holidays in financial perspective.

This is the time of year when most people spend more than they should, but the holidays don't have to mean drained savings accounts and bills to pay in January. It isn't the price tag, flashing lights or how big the box is that counts. Simple things can mean the most.

How much can you afford to spend for the holiday season? As a guideline, allowing 1-1/2 percent of your gross income for holiday spending is a reasonable figure. For a $30,000 income, that's $450.

Don't equate money with love. The amount of love you have for someone shouldn't have any bearing upon the amount spent on a gift. Remember that the best holiday gift is one that gives of you, your time, your talents and your love.

Remember, it's OK to simplify your life, especially around the holidays. Doing so may save you some stress and money, and help to put things in perspective.

On Being a Farm Wife

(and other hazards)

Joyce Bupp

All is well.

"Belt keeps slipping on silage cart; do we have another? Cows seemed extra hungry. All is well."

How comforting it is to arrive home late in the evening from a dinner meeting to find the front porch light glowing and a short, reassuring note on the kitchen table that "all is well" around the farm. Sometimes the days get so busy and so filled with hustling to keep up with the myriad of endless details that we forget just what "is well" and what "isn't well."

For the most part, normal, usual, ordinary, routine days are well. It's when those cataclysmic events or occurrences smash into our lives that it is suddenly and dramatically not well at all.

High-moisture corn harvest is just about wrapped up, though the high-moisture part is drier than it should be this rapid dry-down season. And while yields were down, with our area's 10-inch rainfall deficit, having adequate yellow grain to even fill the silo is gratifying. Extra to sell would help the budget balancing, but it's not the end of the world. The cows will eat this winter. And so will we.

All is well.

Little glitches in need of repair keep popping up inside the combine as corn and soybean harvest continues — ailing chains, blown hoses, cranky sprockets — but still our veteran machine plugs on, separating grain from stalk and pod. When a bearing broke, dropped hot bits of metal onto dry fodder, and kindled itself into flames, The Farmer fortunately glanced into the dusky evening reflecting in the rear view mirror just in time to see the flickering orange.

He instantly killed the motor, grabbed the large fire extinguisher — one of the half-dozen he had just purchased recently — and did a hasty, 100-yard dash through the tangle of stalks to squash the blaze. Even before the smoke was cleared, alert farm neighbors were headed his way, shovels in hand, to lend their assistance if necessary. Blessedly, it wasn't.

All is well.

A matching pair of the extinguishers now rides in the cab, doubling the firepower we hope we never need in case of a similar occurrence. And a few more we had ordered even before the field fire occurred turned up on the barn floor just a day or two later, quite by happenstance.

Or maybe not just by happenstance.

All is well.

Gentle new heifer Maggie's teats swelled at calving, resulting in the peeling away of some skin, leaving her in need of a little extra tender, loving care and repeated applications of medicated ointments. Bless her heart, she rarely even lifts a foot in protest. Herdmate, No. 5100, came up lame with a very sore foot. And a late-season possible pinkeye case was noted, the first case of what is a fairly routine hot weather eye problem, which was almost nonexistent among "the girls" this past hot, humid season.

When tempted to get frustrated over these routine health problems, I try to remind myself that a barn full of cattle is the equivalent of caring for an elementary school full of several hundred school-aged kids (only these are four-legged). And what school doesn't always have some health or germ-related issue — sniffing colds, sore throats, stomach bugs, even head lice — running through a group of children confined in a somewhat concentrated area.

All is well. Even with these normal, routine, health issues to deal with every day in our four-legged family.

Phones ring, people stop by, mail arrives. They demand responses: call back, fix things, place orders, change orders, send checks, send bills, fix things, send back wrong stuff and order new. Fix more things.

Like many careers, farming carries a considerable level of stress, especially at the extra-busy planting and harvest seasons. But, as I recently heard a farm management speaker remind: "Living without stress means you're dead."

So, even being stressed is normal. We learn to deal with it. And life goes on.

All is well.

Safe Harvest Takes Time, Caution

NEWARK, Del. — Although harvest is a busy time on the farm, don't hurry safety, warns Ron Jester, Cooperative Extension safety specialist at the University of Delaware. Safety first when using harvesting equipment such as combines, he says, will reduce the number of fall farm accidents.

"While combines are used for considerably fewer hours than tractors, studies show that they cause twice the number of reportable injuries," says Jester. "And more than half of combine mishaps occur while victims are clearing, repairing or adjusting the machine. Always shut down power before making any repair."

The safety specialist lists human error as a major factor in most harvest injuries. He says studies indicate that 90 percent of all accidents are caused by people taking unsafe chances, often because of haste or fatigue.

"American farmers take pride in their ability to work long hours. Nowhere is this more evident than in harvesting operations," notes Jester. "However, drowsiness, weariness, and illness frequently contribute to mishaps in the field."

"Recognize when you have had enough and call it quits for the day," he adds. "And don't rely on stimulants to keep you going. Alcohol, drugs and some medicines work against the keen awareness vital to safety."

Jester suggests periodic breaks to relieve the monotony of machinery operation. "Even if you eat your meals in the field," Jester advises, "at least get off the equipment and relax for 15 to 20 minutes."

Dress for comfort and safety, he says. Protective footwear and close-fitting clothing are essential when working around equipment. Dust and noise also contribute to fatigue so wear a comfortable respirator and hearing protection.

According to Jester, equipment-related accidents that injure and kill can be prevented by following safe practices. He offers a list of harvest operational guidelines:

- Take time now to get your equipment harvest-ready, ensuring safe and efficient operating condition.

- Carry out routine maintenance on schedule in the evening; fuel and lubricate equipment for the next day to prevent condensation and corrosion.

- Secure all guards and shields before starting equipment. These safety devices reduce the potential for individuals getting caught up in moving parts.

- Block the tires of hydraulically-operated equipment before working around or under the equipment.

- Shut off the power before leaving the driver's seat.

- Do not unplug equipment when power is engaged! In the event the machine suddenly clears itself, the human brain cannot send a signal fast enough to the hand to let go of crop materials. With the power and speed of modern equipment, dismemberment and/or death is a likely result.

- Keep a fire extinguisher on each piece of equipment.

- Do not allow children in the workplace, especially when large equipment operation is involved. Tragedy can occur when children get in the path of equipment from which the operator's view is restricted.

- Operating on highways is more dangerous than in fields, so keep your SMV emblem clean, put on warning lights and use escort vehicles on busy highways, where the road curves and in other hazardous locations and always wear a seatbelt.

Study Links Soft Drink Consumption To Calcium-Poor Diets, Weak Bones

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — A new study published in the "American Journal of Clinical Nutrition" reveals when women guzzle soft drinks, they may be wreaking havoc on their bones.

"Our research results indicate that colas and other soft drinks are a significant problem," says the study's co-author and calcium researcher Robert P. Heaney, M.D., professor of medicine from Creighton University's Osteoporosis Research Center. He pointed to the low overall nutrient value of soft drinks as a key medical issue. The key problem source in soft drinks is their lack of nutrients needed for bone health.

"If women are drinking multiple cans of soft drinks daily, they probably are not drinking enough milk, which supplies the right mix of calcium, vitamin D, and other nutrients bones need," Heaney said.

According to the dairy checkoff-funded Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program getting enough milk is much easier today with the wide range of available flavors and packaging. "Instead of grabbing a soft drink to satisfy a sweet tooth, women should consider savoring flavored milk," says Amy Mobley, a registered dietitian and spokesperson for PDPP. "These milks taste great, and also provide a nutrient package of calcium plus eight other essential nutrients."

Food Storage

Whether you are storing canned or frozen foods you want to organize items and place foods to maximize their quality. Label each container of food with the date it was processed and the type and variety of the food. Place the food where it is easy to locate and easy to rotate as older items are used. Prepare only enough food for one year to maximize the quality and nutritional value of the food. Chemical changes occur as food is in storage and these are more noticeable after one year. Use food which has been stored the longest period of time first.

What are some general guidelines for storing canned foods?

Check that lids are tightly sealed. Remove screw bands. Wash and dry the lid and jar to remove any food residue that might mold in storage. Do not replace the bands. When bands are left on jars, they may corrode and be difficult to remove. Store jars in a clean, cool, dark, dry place. Light hastens oxidation and destroys certain vitamins. Light causes some food to fade in color. An ideal solution is to store jars in the cartons in which they were purchased.

At what temperature should jars be stored?

The ideal temperature range for storing home canned foods is between 50 degrees and 70 degrees Fahrenheit. Do not store jars above 95 degrees F. or near hot pipes, a range, a furnace, in an uninsulated attic, or in direct sunlight. Excessive heat, cold or light causes food to lose quality in a few weeks or months.

Is the food safe to eat if the food freezes in the jars?

Accidental freezing of canned foods will not cause spoilage unless jars become unsealed. However, food expands when frozen and may break the seal. Freezing and thawing may also soften food. If jars must be stored in an area subject to freezing, insulate jars with newspaper and place in heavy cartons.

How long can canned foods be stored?

Food that has been properly canned will keep indefinitely but will maintain its best quality for one year. After a year some chemical changes that affect flavor, color, texture, and nutritional value do occur. This process occurs faster when foods are stored at temperatures above 70 degrees F.

What is the shelf life of frozen food?

Shelf life varies with the type of food. Properly processed and packaged fruits and vegetables will maintain their quality for a year. Processed and cooked meats have a shorter shelf life than uncooked roasts. Beef keeps longer than pork or lamb. Ground beef should be used within two to four months. An uncooked beef roast would be good up to one year.

How can I avoid freezer burn?

When torn, unsealed packages or packing material that is not moisture and vapor-proof are used, moisture vapor is gradually lost. Moderate to severe losses of vapor from frozen food, especially meats, dries the surface tissue of the food. This dried tissue is known as "freezer burn." Food surfaces with freezer burn are abnormally light in color and contain denatured protein. While safe, frozen foods having this defect are tough, dry, and less flavorful when served. Careful sealing and handling to avoid tearing of packages minimize this problem.

At what temperature should the freezer be maintained?

Zero degrees Fahrenheit

Why do some fruits get a gummy liquid at the bottom of the package?

This problem is most noticeable when fruits are frozen too slowly and when freezer temperature is too high or fluctuates. These conditions cause large ice crystals to form, rupturing the fruit cells and producing a liquid even at 0 degrees F.

What package materials are good for freezing foods?

Use materials that are moisture and vapor proof, odorless, tasteless, grease proof, and resistant to tears and breakage. Good choices include polyethylene (freezer weight) bags with tape or wire-tie seals, plastic freezer film, glass freezer jars, rigid plastic containers with freezer-tape seals, and laminated freezer paper. Packages that are square or rectangular with straight sides and edges maximize the amount of storage space that can be used.

Can commercial plastic containers be used?

Use only food grade plastics. Do not use garbage bags, trash liners, or plastic buckets not meant for food use or previously used to hold toxic chemicals. For example, do not use plastic laundry buckets for storing dry cereal.

A Home Economist is available to answer your food preservation questions on Wednesdays from 9 a.m.-1 p.m. Call (717) 394-6851 or write Penn State Cooperative Extension, Lancaster County, 1383 Arcadia Road, Room 1, Lancaster, PA 17601.

Follow Instructions For Drying Herbs

For the best flavor, use scissors to gather leaves and stems on a sunny morning just after the dew has evaporated and before the heat of the sun has dissipated the flavoring oils. Leaves of herbs should be harvested just before the plant begins to flower.

Preparation for drying herbs includes rinsing the leaves and stems with cold water, either by submerging or holding under running water; shake off the excess water. Cut off any dead or discolored leaves or stems.

There are several ways to preserve herbs:

Room Drying: Cover a wire tray or a window screen with cheesecloth. Place a layer of herbs on the cheesecloth and cover with another thin layer of cheesecloth to keep off the dust and insects. Place the tray in a clean, warm location with props underneath the corners of the screen to allow air to circulate. Turn the herbs over every day or two so they will dry evenly.

Oven Drying: It is very difficult to adjust the oven temperature to below 100°F. which is best for drying. Cover the oven racks with cheesecloth and proceed the same as if you were room drying. Prop the oven door open slightly to let the moisture escape.

Microwave Oven: This is a good method to use for small quantities of herbs. Place four or five stalks with leaves between paper towels. Set the microwave timer for two to three minutes on a medium high power. Check to see if the stems and leaves are sufficiently dry. If not, reset the time for an additional 30 seconds and check again. Repeat this process as often as necessary to dry the herbs. Caution must be taken when drying in the microwave. If leaves are overdried, they will burn and so will the paper towel. Read the manufacturer's directions for your oven.

Dehydrator: This method produces high quality dried herbs because it takes only two to three hours and has a controlled temperature with good air circulation. Set the thermostat of the dehydrator at 90-100 degrees. Do not dry herbs with other moist foods.

The most difficult and most important part of drying herbs is making sure that the herbs are dry. Brittle stems that break and seeds that fall from the chaff are indicators of dryness. Seeds should be brittle. If insufficiently dry, herbs will mold.

stronger than their fresh counterparts because they have been concentrated. If the recipe calls for a fresh herb, you can usually use 1/3 to 1/4 as much of the dried. However, through storage the strength of herbs deteriorates. The safest way to use dried herbs is to start with a small amount, taste, and add more if the flavor isn't quite strong enough.

Here are some ideas for using herbs. A mixture called fine herbs uses equal parts of chives, chervil, tarragon or rosemary and parsley. Fine herbs is used to season meats, casseroles, fish, salads or egg dishes.

A bouquet garni is made up of thyme, bay leaf, parsley, and celery leaves tied in a cheesecloth bag or tied in a coffee filter. It is used to season stock, soups, or stews.

An easy way to add extra spark to a meal is by making a flavored butter to add to vegetables or to top hot rolls or toasted Italian bread. Cream butter or margarine, then beat in herbs or flavoring. Extras can be packaged in small cups or "foil bricks" to freeze for later use. Why not try using your herbs for your own favorite combinations?

Frozen Herbs: Some herbs can be frozen for future use. Parsley, chives and dill freeze very well. Simply rinse and pat dry then chop and freeze. Dill weed and dill heads can be frozen. Over-wrap plastic bags containing herbs with aluminum foil or freeze in glass jars.

The flavor of some herbs migrates through plastic and can flavor its neighbor in the freezer. Chopped green onions with tops also freeze very well.

Six Granddaughters Continue Family Tradition: Combine Singing And Milk Promotion

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family
Features Editor

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Singing and dairy promotion have always been important to Paul and Pat Miller, Harrisburg. Although that combination may seem incongruous, the family continues to find novel ways to utilize singing with promoting dairy products.

In recent months, the Millers' six granddaughters have conducted a "nursing home blitz" by taking the milk message to shut-ins across the state.

Maintaining one of the few dairy farms close to Harrisburg suburbs, the Millers' were immersed in dairy-related activities connected with their 253-acre dairy farm. Then in 1970, the family survived a arsonist's barn fire. In appreciation to the many who helped with cleanup and rebuilding, the family went from home to home singing Christmas carols the first Christmas following the September fire.

Soon churches and organizations asked the Millers to present singing programs. The Millers and their three children Debbie, 15; Jeffrey, 13; and Michael, 11, made their rounds as entertainment in church and agricultural circles, and even cut three long-playing records. At programs, they always sang "Make My Milk Today," which a dairy-related company had recorded on a 45 rpm, which sold throughout the U.S.

When daughter Deb reigned as the state dairy princess in 1974-1975, dairy promotion branched out into another outlet. Pat often accompanied Deb across the state and saw the vital role promotion plays in encouraging people to drink milk and buy real dairy products. Pat joined Pennsylvania Dairy Princess and Promotion Service, where she served on the board for 16 years and as its treasurer for eight years.

All this started long before the Millers' six granddaughters were born. But singing and dairy promotion have been absorbed by

Consuming Thoughts

Everyone who watches television sees the food advertisements, but are you aware of how much influence television food ads have in swaying American eating habits. Television commercials relay a picture of U.S. eating habits that would have you believe the typical American drinks lemonade made with lemons, sits down to a breakfast of cereal resembling tiny chocolate chip cookies, and eats daily at fast food restaurants.

But this picture isn't an accurate one—at least not yet. But it may become uncomfortably familiar as food producers continue to influence consumer buying habits through huge advertising expenditures.

The food marketing system spends more on national media advertising than any other industry, allocating a higher percentage of sales dollars to advertising than is returned in profits. And the largest advertisers may control so much prime television advertising time that they can effectively shut their competitors out of the market. The consumer's choices are not unlimited—they are limited by what is offered. People's buying decisions may be almost predetermined because of the giant companies in the food manufacturing industry.

The most advertised items are those with high profit margins—primarily highly-processed, prepared foods.

These are not necessarily the best foods we could eat from a nutritional standpoint. Fruits and vegetables, meats, fish, and dairy products account for about half of the consumer's food budget but less than 10 percent of food advertising dollars, and advertising expenditures for many other foods—like soft drinks, candy, and breakfast cereals—are all out of proportion to their importance in the American diet. One reason for these disparities is that, with the exception of newspaper ads, which provide week-to-week price information, food advertising is primarily image creating rather than informative. These ads are creating a need that doesn't exist, for foods we might well do without.

Almost half of all media food advertising dollars is spent on television. And there is a particular concern for food advertising aimed at children. The average child 11 or under watches many hours of television a week, and sees many thousands of food commercials a year. The majority of those commercials are for foods, with breakfast cereals, primarily presweetened ones, candies, and other sweets the most advertised products. Television shows children what our society deems good to eat, and by implication what is not good.

Consumption of highly sugared foods between meals contributes to tooth decay and that, in addition, too many sweet things can keep more nutritious foods out of the diet.

Parents can, of course, reduce television influence on their children's eating habits and attitudes by commenting on programs and commercials and limiting or monitoring use of the television. But the airwaves are meant to serve the public. Advertising pays for the entertainment offered on television, and helps support other media, so many are reluctant to set restrictions on the industry for fear of losing revenue.

A smart shopper has their work cut out for them as they pick and choose nutritional foods for their family.

Taste Of Pennsylvania Recipe Books Available

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — Rep. Leroy Zimmerman (R-99) has available copies of a handy recipe book from the State Department of Agriculture called "A Taste of Pennsylvania," which highlights innovative uses for agricultural products produced in the state.

"A good cook is always looking for new recipes to try," said Zimmerman. "What better place to find them than in an official publication of the Agricultural Department. The booklet contains recommended recipes from the industry boards that promote the agricultural products we use every day, and some that maybe we should try."

The recipes included in the booklet are suggestions from respected statewide organizations like the Pennsylvania Beef Council, Pennsylvania Poultry Federation, Pennsylvania Association of Meat Producers, Pennsylvania Pork Producers Association, Pennsylvania Sheep and Wool Growers Association, Pennsylvania Emu Farmers Association, Eastern Bison Association, American Mushroom Institute and Mushroom Council, Pennsylvania State Beekeepers Association, Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program, Pennsylvania Apple Marketing Program, Pennsylvania Nut Growers Association, Pennsylvania Vegetable Marketing and Research Program, Pennsylvania State Association of County Fairs, Pennsylvania Farm-City Council and Penn's Agri-Women.

"Agriculture is Pennsylvania's number one industry, producing some of the best fruits, vegetables, legumes, mushrooms, meats, cheeses, milk products, breads, honey, snack foods, you name it, not just on the East Coast, but in the whole country," said Zimmerman.

Copies of the booklet are available in Zimmerman's office at 609 East Main Street, Box 59, Ephrata. The telephone number is (717) 733-4002.

More Than One Way To Eat A Grape

KINGSVILLE, Ohio — There's more than one way to eat a Concord grape. You can suck out the juice, chew up the pulp, then spit out what's left of the pulp, seeds and skin. Or, simply, you can wolf it down whole.

Children discover these methods and more at the Grape Research Branch in Ashtabula County. The 25-acre facility, an outlying branch of Ohio State University's Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center, hosts an estimated 600 visitors a year, most of them students. They walk the vineyards, taste the grapes and take home samples of freshly squeezed juice.

"The kids get a lot of senses excited," said Greg Johns, branch manager. "The tastes, the sights, the smell of the ripening grapes. The parents I run into say their kids talk all about it."

Including how to chomp a Concord. It's not like eating a Thompson Seedless.

"A lot of kids don't have a clue that grapes are grown in Ohio," Johns said. "They've never eaten a Concord grape. It's one of the things I bring up: How do you eat it? It's got seeds, the slip skin (the skin comes off like a bag), the insides are gooey and juicy, and between myself, the kids and the teachers, we talk about the different ways we've learned to eat them: whether you suck the juice out and spit the slimy part on the ground or eat the whole thing or what."

Concord is the most widely grown grape in Ohio. It's used mainly for jelly and juice. But its acreage has fallen because of low prices: $250 a ton versus $2,000 a ton for Pinot noir. Some Concord vines have been abandoned or have been replaced by higher-value wine grapes.

That's mostly the case at the Kingsville branch, where Concord serves as teaching tools but aren't used much for research.

Wine grapes, instead, are the focus. Studies look at pest, weed and disease control, the effects of compost, and the performance of a wide range of cultivars, clones, rootstocks, spacings and training systems. The grapes, picked in fall, are trucked to OARDC's Wooster campus, where they're analyzed and made into wine.

Why focus on wine grapes? Demand. Only about 30 percent of Ohio grapes are used for wine production, and Ohio wine makers, who import about half of what they need, are eager for more.

"Grape growers and wine makers in Ohio are different than any other fruit growers," Johns said. "There doesn't seem to be the competition, the keeping of secrets, that I've seen among growers of other commodities. You can be starting a vineyard and a winery right next door to another vineyard and winery, and (the owners) will be helping you all along the way. They'll loan you their tractors and their sprayers, and they'll tell you how they did something."

Johns and colleagues respond in kind. They conduct research, tell what they learn, and save grape growers the cost and risk of doing the experiments themselves. Articles, bulletins and newsletters are published. Educational events are held.

For more information on projects and tours at the branch, contact Johns at (440) 224-0273 or johns.1@osu.edu.

ANSWER — Toni Kellers, Bedminster Township, requested a recipe for gingerbread-in-a-jar.

Gingerbread Baked In A Jar

- 2 1/4 cups flour
- 1 teaspoon baking soda
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon cinnamon, ground
- 3/4 cup butter, softened
- 1/2 cup molasses

- 3/4 cup sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon baking powder
- 2 teaspoons ground ginger
- 1 teaspoon ground cloves
- 3/4 cup water

Preheat oven to 325 degrees. Grease five 12-ounce quality crystal jelly jars (must have straight sides, no bulges in the jars). Use a pastry brush to grease the jars. Do not use vegetable spray, it doesn't work. In a large bowl, combine flour, sugar, baking soda, baking powder, salt, ginger, cinnamon, and cloves. Stir in butter, water, and molasses until well blended. Pour mixture equally into five jars. Place jars on a cookie sheet in the center of the oven and bake 35 minutes or until tester comes out clean. Have sterilized lids ready. Take one jar at a time from the oven, place a lid and ring on top and screw down tightly.

ANSWER — Barbara Shank, Oxford, wanted a recipe for hot pepper jam or jelly. Thanks to Tessie Kizis, Newsoms, Va., for sending a recipe, although she writes that she has never had the nerve to try it.

Mark Pinter's Hiccup-Hot Red Pepper Jelly

2 cups hot peppers (serranos, jalapenos, or a mix), including seeds, washed, and destemmed, and finely chopped.

- 1/2 cup red bell pepper, seeded, finely chopped

- 1 1/2 cups cider vinegar

- 1 teaspoon salt

- 6 1/2 cups sugar

- 6-ounce package Certo pectin

Sterilize seven 8-ounce jelly jars according to directions that came with the jars.

Place peppers, vinegar, and salt in a pot. Bring mixture to a boil and simmer five minutes, stirring occasionally. Add water, if needed, to total 3 cups. Return to pot and stir in sugar. Bring to a rolling boil. Boil one minute. Add pectin while boiling. Boil one minute more, stirring occasionally.

Remove from heat. Ladle into sterilized jars, leaving about 1/4-inch room at top. Seal jars and allow to cool.

ANSWER — Nicole Powell, Clarion-Venango County Dairy Princess, suggests serving ice cream punch for Halloween parties in any flavor desired. Drop in plastic spiders and eyeballs for a very scary dairy treat.

Milk Punch

- 1 quart vanilla ice cream

- 1 quart sherbet, any flavor

- 16-ounce bottle carbonated lemon-lime beverage

- 6 cups milk

Combine softened ice cream, sherbet, and half the milk. Beat with mixer or blender. Add remaining milk and carbonated beverage. Mix until smooth. 20 servings.

ANSWER — For those wanting a delicious but low-fat cake, here is one that Babe Hopkins, Avondale, uses often for her husband's required low-fat diet.

Orange Loaf Cake

- 1 3/4 cups cake flour

- 1 cup sugar

- 2 teaspoons baking powder

- 1/4 teaspoon salt

- 1/2 cup vegetable oil

- 1/2 cup orange juice

- 4 egg whites

- 2 tablespoons confectioners' sugar

In a mixing bowl, combine all dry ingredients. Add oil and orange juice; beat until smooth. In another mixing bowl, beat egg whites until stiff peaks form. Fold into orange juice mixture. Coat 9x5x3-inch loaf pan with non-stick cooking spray and dust with flour. Pour batter into pan. Bake at 350 degrees for one hour or until toothpick inserted near center comes out clean. Cool for 10 minutes before removing from pan to a wire rack to cool completely. Dust with confectioners' sugar. Yield: 12 servings.

Babe also sends in another recipe that makes quite often.

South Carolina Cobbler

- 4 cups sliced, peeled, fresh or frozen peaches, thawed

- 1 1/2 cups sugar, divided

- 1/2 teaspoon almond extract

- 1/2 cup butter, melted

- 3/4 cup all-purpose flour

- 2 teaspoons baking powder

- Pinch salt

- 3/4 cup milk

- Vanilla ice cream, optional

In a bowl, gently toss peaches, 1 cup sugar, and extract; set aside. Pour butter into a 2-quart baking dish. In a bowl, combine flour, baking powder, salt, and remaining sugar; stir in milk. Mix well. Pour evenly over butter (do not stir). Top with peach mixture. Bake at 350 degrees for 50-55 minutes or until golden brown. Serve with ice cream, if desired. Yield: 8 servings.

ANSWER — Flavored oils can be made by steeping foods such as herbs, chili peppers, citrus rind even nuts in canola oil. The safest and easiest way to transfer the flavor is to heat the oil with the flavoring ingredient at a low oven temperature for a specified time. This allows the water to evaporate, and the flavor of the food to be infused with oil.

Be wary of instructions for making flavored oils using fresh produce if the oil is not heated because there is a risk of botulism toxin developing in the oil.

Here are a few recipes from the Minnesota Canola Council. Send for a free brochure with step-by-step instructions, tips, and additional recipes. To receive your free copy, send a business-sized, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Minnesota Canola Council, Flavored Oils, 4630 Churchill St., Suite 1, St. Paul, MN 55126.

Sundried Tomato Oil

- 1 cup canola oil

- 2 tablespoons coarsely chopped sundried tomatoes

- 2 tablespoons coarsely chopped shallots

- 2 large cloves garlic, halved

Pour canola oil into a 2-cup glass measuring cup. Add sundried tomatoes, shallots, and garlic. Set the container on a pie plate in the center of oven. Heat at 300 degrees for two hours. Remove from oven and let cool 30 minutes. Line a strainer with a coffee filter. Strain oil into a clean jar, cover, and refrigerate. Use oil within one month.

Pasta Primavera

- 1 pound angel hair or spaghetti pasta

- 2 cups fresh vegetables (carrot, red pepper strips, asparagus pieces, snow peas, broccoli flowerets)

- 2 tablespoons sundried tomato-flavored oil

- 1/2 cup grated parmesan cheese

- 1/4 cup chopped fresh basil or 1 tablespoon dried basil

- 1/4 teaspoon ground black pepper

In a large pot of boiling water, cook pasta until tender but firm, 3-4 minutes. Microwave vegetables until tender-crisp or add vegetables to the pasta the last two minutes of cooking. Drain pasta and vegetables and return to cooking pot. Toss with remaining ingredients. Serve immediately. Makes 4 servings.

Lemon Basil Oil

- 2 tablespoons lemon zest, cut in 1/2-inch pieces

- 15 fresh basil leaves

- 1 cup canola oil

Heat the oil, lemon zest, and basil leaves in a 300 degree oven until the temperature of the oil reaches 250 degrees.

Cool oil, refrigerate until ready to use.

Ida's Notebook

by

Ida Risser

We've just had our second killing frost. All of our pretty flowers are dead but due to having guests this past weekend, I do have three very pretty bouquets in the house. The pink, red, and white roses are beautiful in a green vase.

No more delicious red tomatoes, but I did pick some green ones and hope they'll ripen. There are still lots of tiny cabbage heads growing where I cut off the large head. This year again I have frozen cole slaw which tastes so good in the wintertime.

I've moved some houseplants from outside and brought all the squash and pumpkins from the garden. Now I'll move our summer clothes from one closet to another. It is a sign of changing seasons.

Another sign of changing seasons is the New Holland parade. This year we watched a wonderful three-hour parade. It was very well organized and had 17 marching bands, numerous floats, and the biggest trucks I'd ever seen. I remember when my parents took their children to see the parade each fall in New Holland.

My husband has been trying to remove some stumps from the edge of a field. Some are sawed off and some are burned. It takes a long time to burn a stump down to the ground. Now we can farm over and not around the stumps.

As our son has a full-time job off the farm, he works in the fields early in the morning and late at night. The tractor lights bounce up and down as I see him discing ground to plant rye. He works very hard and so does his wife as they board many heifers for other folks. People bring their animals from all parts of the state. This work plus the sports activities of their three children keep them too busy.

Shelf Life Of Canned Goods

Food that has been properly canned will keep indefinitely but will maintain its best quality for one year.

After a year, some chemical changes do occur that affect flavor, color, texture, and nutritional value. This process occurs faster when foods are stored at temperatures above 70 degrees F.

Susquehanna County 4-H'ers Compete At Pa. Junior Dairy Show

The senior and grand champion Red and White animal was Goff-Farms Locate Gracy-Red, shown by Dan Puzo of the Watrous Corners 4-H Club. Dan has been a 4-H member showing dairy animals for seven years.

To be eligible to participate at the Pennsylvania State Junior Dairy Show a 4-H dairy project member must first exhibit at their County 4-H Dairy Roundup and then qualifying at the District 4-H Dairy Show by receiving a blue ribbon. It is a honor earned by a 4-H dairy member to participate at the State Junior Dairy Show.

Youth participating in the State Junior Dairy Show also have the opportunity to compete in the All-American Dairy Show Youth Showmanship Contest. A record breaking 229 participants from Pennsylvania took part in this year's contest.

Cody Mack from Kingsley was selected as one of the top 10 finalists in the junior division. Other participants from Susquehanna County included Nick Pease, Sara and Shannon Oliver, Amanda and Andy Miner, Lucas, Shana and Dustin Mack and Alyssa and Jenna Sprout.

Parents Key To Reducing Child Pedestrian Injuries

NEWARK, Del. — Pedestrian injuries and fatalities are on the rise in Delaware. According to the 2000 Delaware's annual Traffic Statistical Report, last year's total pedestrian fatalities reached a five-year high. One-third of these pedestrian injuries and deaths were children.

"Although pedestrian injuries are a leading cause of death among young children, few communities have made the issue a priority," says Ron Jester, Cooperative Extension safety specialist at the University of Delaware. "Parents and caregivers must be more aware of the dangers that children face and actively teach safety practices."

According to Jester, researchers have found that parents are overly optimistic about their children's ability to deal with difficult traffic situations, giving them more credit for judgment than they actually have. In studies undertaken by the Transportation Research Board, in which children (ages 5 to 12) were observed crossing streets at intersections, four out of every 10 children did not look for traffic before stepping into the street.

"Only one in five children checked both left and right before crossing," Jester says. "And, surprisingly, older children were less likely to look than younger ones. At intersections with signals, more than 90 percent of the children started crossing against the light."

It also was found that parents tend to give their children more credit than the child's traffic safety abilities and age warrant. Parents involved in the research allowed their children to cross streets alone at between 9 and 10 years of age. However, Jester asserts, the age of traffic maturity is 12, an age at which children are "ready to listen, scan, and make safe decisions about traffic."

Jester says that several developmental factors limit a child's ability to cross streets safely:

- Children are impulsive; their drives are not dictated by traffic.
- Children are unable to judge speed and distance; consequently, they can make bad decisions about oncoming traffic.
- Children lack an adequate field of vision; their field of vision is one-third that of adults.
- Children lack cognitive skills; they have trouble focusing attention or handling more than one traffic factor at a time.
- Children are influenced by peers; if a child is crossing a street with friends, she/he may assume the other looked for oncoming cars.

"Developmental factors help determine the age at which children can safely cross streets," says Jester, "but parents must first cross streets hundreds of times with a child, setting an example before letting him or her cross unsupervised."

Parents and caregivers must rehearse safety rules with children to reinforce safe behaviors through practice:

- Teach your child to stop at the curb, edge of the road or at the outside of a parked car. If a parked car is involved, have them verify that the car isn't about to move by making contact with the driver.
- Show your child how to sharply turn his head and eyes left-right-left while searching and listening for traffic. After all cars have passed have them look left-right-left again before crossing. Remember to keep looking in all directions as you cross the road. Only after this proper search can the child cross. Rehearse this walk smart behavior as often as possible until you feel the safety message is secure in the child's mind.

Other important safety practices include walking directly across the street — not diagonally, looking over your shoulder for turning traffic at intersections, following traffic safety.

For more information or a copy of the "Walk Smart" booklet on pedestrian safety, contact University of Delaware Cooperative Extension at (302) 856-7303.

Helping Kids Get Through Scary Times

BOSTON, Mass. — "Do you think that a plane will crash into our house?" asked 4-year-old Michael.

Children all across the country are filled with such questions about their basic safety. Nightmares, outbursts, or bed-wetting are but a few of the stress reactions. What can a parent do?

Adoptive families, no stranger to trauma and loss, offer possible answers. In 1975, lifebooks were developed to help older adopted children with the most fundamental of losses — losing a mother.

A lifebook is a record of a child's life from birth. It uses words, photos, and the child's artwork to chronicle the critical events in a child's life in child-friendly terms. Even for children who are not adopted, a lifebook is a great thing for parents and children to produce together. Not only can a lifebook bring them closer together as they make the book, but it also helps children feel good about themselves. Easy-to-make lifebooks create a comforting ritual.

"Creating lifebooks is an opportunity for parents to directly check in with their children emotionally," says Beth O'Malley M.Ed., author of Lifebooks: Creating a Treasure for the Adopted Child. "A lifebook gives a sense of history yet looks to the future."

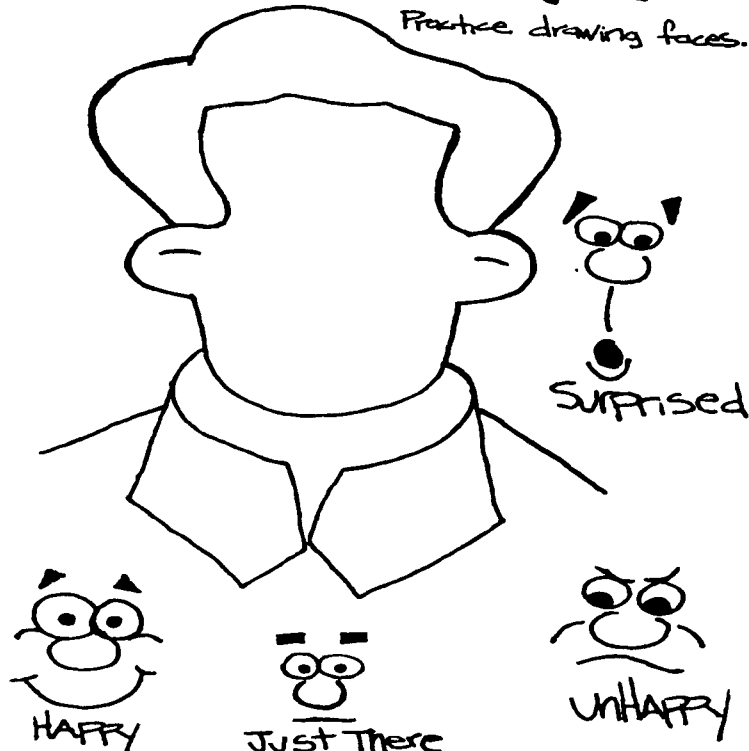

In light of the recent World Trade Center tragedy, O'Malley has written a special report for any family interested in making a lifebook plus tips on talking to children about terrorism/death.

To receive a free copy of Lifebooks: Help Your Child Today, send an e-mail to lifebooks@earthlink.net with the words "Help for Kids" in the subject line or send a SASE to Adoption-Works, P.O. Box 520178, Winthrop, MA 02152.

with Twig Walkingstick

Dear Twig: What are hedge apples? My father points them out to me when we're driving in the country.

Oo, I like hedge apples. The hedge apple tree is one of my favorites. It's also called Osage orange, or, scientifically, Maclura pomifera.

The hedge apple/Osage orange is a medium-size tree that grows big honkin' fruit. These fruit aren't apples and they also aren't oranges. Instead, they're green like a frog, as big as a softball and wrinkled like a brain. If Newton had been konked by one he would've been knocked silly. I don't know Bob the Bug's excuse.

Some folks risk konking. They gather hedge apples then put them in their homes. They claim hedge apples keep out pests. Whether this actually works or not hasn't been proven by science. But one study has shown that certain oils in the fruit, some of them unidentified, make roaches run away.

Osage oranges are native to parts of Texas and Oklahoma. But you can find them growing in most other states. They were widely planted as living fences before the invention of barbed wire.

Another common name is bodark, or bois d'arc — French for "wood of the bow." Osage orange wood makes great bows. Long-lasting fence posts, too. All in all it's quite a tree!

ANSWER — Sadie Swaray, Myerstown, wanted instructions on year-round care for poinsettia and how to make it bloom during the Christmas season. Thanks to Richard Herring, Kennett Square, for sending the following information:

- Poinsettias need indirect sunlight at least six hours daily. Place a curtain of light shade between the sun and the plant if direct sunlight cannot be avoided. Temperatures should not exceed 70 degrees or fall below 55 degrees.

- Keep poinsettias away from heat and drafts as the soil must stay moderately moist. Water thoroughly when the soil feels dry to touch. Do not let the plant stand in water.

- After blooming, fertilize every two to three weeks with a balanced household fertilizer to maintain foliage.

- When the top-colored growth (bratts) lose their appeal, cut the plant back to about eight inches. Though stark in appearance, by May the plant will have new growth. By June 1, repot the plant. Use heavily organic soil. Place the plant outdoors when the weather is warm.

- The plant will begin producing flowers in the fall. Starting Oct. 1, be sure the poinsettia has a least four hours of total, continuous darkness each night and about six to eight hours of bright sunlight each day. The plant will not bloom properly without this strict regimen. Night time temperatures must not be below 60 degrees.

Apple Ministry Boosts Morale In Big City

DAVE LEFEVER
Lancaster Farming Staff

LITITZ (Lancaster Co.) — When Ivan Lutz retired from the ministry in 1993, he finally had time to live out another calling that had been in his heart for years — helping to provide for people less privileged than himself.

Lutz had served as minister at Middle Creek Church of the Brethren for 30 years while also holding down another job, responsibilities that left him little time for the volunteer work he wanted to do.

"I wanted to go into the city and give little bags of apples to shut-ins," he said.

He began acting on that dream in Jan. 1994 by delivering local apples to the Salvation Army and the Water Street Rescue Mission in Lancaster.

Eight years later, Lutz's thriving "apple business" includes regular deliveries of 45-pound boxes of apples to about 225 places in more than 10 cities, including Harrisburg, Lancaster, New York, and Philadelphia.

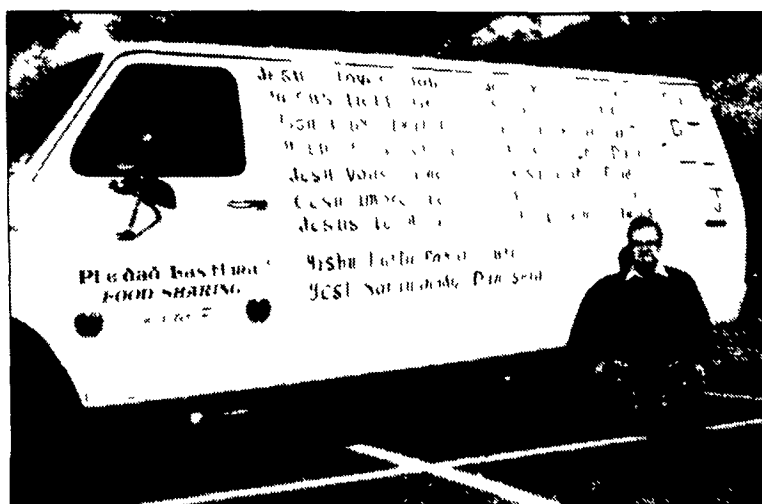

His white Econoline van, painted with the words "Jesus loves you" in various languages, logs about 12,000 miles a year making the rounds to women and children's shelters, drug and alcohol rehabilitation homes, Salvation Army centers, missions, teen juvenile centers, homeless shelters, and pregnancy centers.

He makes the 225 stops over a period of about eight weeks, then starts the cycle again. According to Lutz, he never needs to make delivery appointments and many people on the route call him by name.

"They're delighted to see you," he said. "A big part of this is the encouragement it gives to these people."

Lutz chose apples for his charitable cause because "almost anybody can eat them," including kids. He said he has seen children slice the apples in half and slather them with peanut butter to eat on the spot.

He uses funds raised in Sunday School collections as well as some of his own money to buy apples

Ivan Lutz's van logs about 12,000 miles a year making apple deliveries to shelters and missions in more than 10 cities. "Jesus loves you" is represented in 17 languages on the side panel. Lutz purchases apples at a bargain price from nearby Hess Brothers Fruit Company for his ministry.

in bulk. He expressed gratitude to Hess Brothers Fruit Company, near Oregon in Lancaster County, for their generosity in supplying him with various kinds of apples at a bargain price for the cause.

Lutz said that his generosity comes from recognizing that he has reaped the benefits of a booming economy that included unprecedented increases in property values and pension plans during his lifetime.

"My generation got more from America than any other generation," he said. "(By donating apples) we're giving something back."

Lutz said he always takes one or more helpers along with him on his delivery rounds, giving willing people the opportunity to volunteer as well as the chance to see urban cultures and sites.

"The general idea is to combine sightseeing (with the apple delivery)," Lutz said. About 150 volunteers have helped him over the years.

The terrorist attacks of Sept. 11 didn't keep Lutz and his helpers away from making their rounds in New York City. On Sept. 23, Lutz, along with friends Harold Musser and Bob Kurtz took the trip to Manhattan to make apple deliveries downtown, including to the Bowery Street Mission and other locations as close as eight blocks to where the World Trade Center towers had stood.

Both Kurtz and Musser are employed part-time at Garden Spot Auction.

They traveled in a van volunteered and manned by Kurtz, a driver with many years of experience making deliveries for Risser Poultry.

"We had mixed emotions about going," Kurtz said.

Changes brought by the attacks hit home to the three men even before they could enter the city. The Holland Tunnel — a major gate to lower Manhattan — was closed, forcing the apple-laden van to take a detour and enter through the Lincoln Tunnel farther north.

Once downtown, the men witnessed the cordoned-off area blocks away from the devastated site and "a lot more police" than usual patrolling the area.

A woman at a Third Avenue mission where they deliver apples told them that the mission had fed and cared for fireman and policeman working at the attack site. She mentioned nearby fire companies who had their numbers of fireman cut in half in the toll taken by the catastrophe.

Lutz's normal plan of taking volunteers sightseeing in the area of the World Trade Center was cancelled. According to Musser, they saw "candles burning and piles of flowers" on the street in memory of the victims.

Food And Farms Summit To Feature Four State Agricultural Leaders

PHILADELPHIA — Registering is open for the third annual Future of Our Food and Farms Summit, to take place in Philadelphia Nov. 29 and 30. Four secretaries of agriculture from New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland and Delaware will introduce their views about the future of agriculture in the Mid-Atlantic region at the conference.

This year's theme, "Spreading the Bounty and Safeguarding the Future" focuses on how to increase good nutrition, reduce hunger and support farming in the Mid-Atlantic region. The conference is hosted by the Farmers' Market Trust and RISA (Regional Infrastructure for Sustaining Agriculture).

"This year at the Summit, you will learn how changes in markets and upcoming legislation in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland, Delaware and the U.S. will affect consumers, farmers, businesses and social services agencies," says Duane Perry, the executive director of the Farmers' Market Trust. "With all four secretaries of agriculture attending, everyone engaged in food marketing, farming and hunger prevention should be at the conference this year."

A pre-conference event — the Hunger Congress — will feature state and federal legislators from the region, including Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland and Delaware. "The Hunger Congress will be a forum for people to ask state and federal officials about upcoming changes in governmental policies that will affect hunger," says John Weidman, from Philabundance and the Food Resources Alliance, a co-sponsor of the Hunger Congress.

In addition to the Hunger Congress, the Future of our Food and Farms Summit will offer sessions geared toward anyone interested in learning about upcoming changes facing agriculture and farming, nutrition education, food marketing and retailing, and hunger.

Session topics include: the new Farm Bill, career preparation in the agriculture industry for youth, nutrition education for children, community food security, ethnic foods, sustainable agriculture and more.

The inspirational film, Homecoming...Sometimes I am haunted by memories of red dirt and clay will also be shown during the Summit. Homecoming...is the story of African-American land loss and a chronicle of black farmers from the Civil War to the present, written and produced by Charlene Gilbert and Philadelphian Quinn Eli.

Sponsors of the Summit include: Land O'Lakes Foundation, Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, Pennsylvania Nutrition Education Network, and Maryland Department of Agriculture. Pennsylvania State Cooperative Extension and College of Agricultural Sciences is a contributor.

The Farmers' Market Trust/RISA is a nonprofit organization located in Philadelphia. The Farmers' Market Trusts' mission is to increase the availability of fresh foods in underserved communities and to improve the connection between urban and agricultural communities. RISA is dedicated to supporting and promoting the food and agriculture system in the Mid-Atlantic region.

The third annual Future of our Food and Farms Summit will be conducted Nov. 29 to Nov. 30 at the Renaissance Hotel, Philadelphia International Airport. For more information on the Summit, visit www.foodfarms.org. Registration is $125 per person; early registration (before Nov. 1) is $105. A special one-day rate of $75 is available. For registration information contact Meredith Stone at the Farmers' Market Trust, (215) 568-0830 x10, or fmtrust@libertynet.org.

Food Preservation Class Offered

COLLEGEVILLE (Montgomery Co.) — Remember those delicious home canned goods that Grandma used to preserve from her backyard garden? Canning procedures have changed dramatically over the years, but many folks still look forward to eating the "fruits of their labor" over the winter months with home preserved foods.

To make sure you don't endanger your family's health by following out-of-date canning instructions, Penn State Cooperative Extension is offering a hands-on workshop to teach to proper methods of home canning.

The three-hour session will be conducted on Wednesday, Oct. 24 at 6-9 p.m. at the Montgomery County 4-H Center on Rt. 113 in Creamery. Participants will learn the latest methods of using a boiling water bath and a pressure canner. They will receive a comprehensive Cooperative Extension canning book and take home two jars of properly processed fruits and vegetables.

Registration is required and class size is limited. There is a cost of $20 per person. To register, call the extension office at (610) 489-4315.

Dairy Promotion, McDonald's Team Up In Kids' Milk Ad

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — As part of the joint producer- and processor-coordinated "got milk?" marketing campaign, Ronald McDonald dons a milk mustache in a new series of print ads targeting moms and kids to underscore the importance of milk in growing healthy bones.

One ad targets moms to highlight their importance as a milk-drinking role model, while the other shows kids the fun of drinking milk.

Since 1963, Ronald McDonald has been a favorite character and symbol of fun for kids and adults. Universally recognized and beloved by all, Ronald enjoys helping kids by talking with them about ecology, problem solving, self-esteem, fitness, character building and now drinking milk.

National and local dairy promotion staff will reach millions of consumers through the distribution of a national video news release and press release targeting the nation's top TV stations, newspaper editors and kid/parenting Websites.

AAW President Appointed To National Trade Committee

FRESNO, Calif. — U.S. Agriculture Secretary Ann M. Veneman recently appointed American Agri-Women President Alice Dettwyler of Salem, Ore., to the Agricultural Technical Advisory Committee for Trade.

Dettwyler will serve with other American agriculturalists on one to five technical advisory committees designed to provide feedback and expert advice on various agricultural issues relating to trade. Dettwyler, whose family farm has produced berries and sod, will serve on the Fruits and Vegetables ATAC.

"I am very honored to serve with other agriculturalists on this committee," said Dettwyler. "Trade is fundamental to a successful agricultural economy and I applaud Secretary Veneman for recognizing that a healthy farm economy is crucial for our country's continued prosperity and competitiveness."

The committees originally were established in 1974 when Congress created a private sector advisory committee system to ensure that trade policy and negotiation objectives adequately reflected U.S. commercial and economic interests. The committees provide the Secretary Veneman and U.S. Trade Representative Robert B. Zoellick with information and advice on negotiating objectives, bargaining positions, and other matters related to the development, implementation and administration of U.S. agricultural trade policy.

AAW is a grassroots, all volunteer organization — the oldest farm women's organization in the country. It is a coalition of individual members, plus 56 state and commodity organizations. AAW is recognized as one of the top 12 U.S. business women's organizations by the Business Women's Network.

Berks Society 1

Berks County Society of Farm Women, Group #1, met at the home of Pearl Levensgood, Douglasville, with 11 members answering to the roll call question of "How are you holding up during the heat?"

Plans were completed for the annual picnic to be conducted at Levensgood's Grove.

A thank you note was acknowledged from the local food pantry for the group's generous donation. The group was asked and agreed to participate in an upcoming yard sale.

Members celebrated a group birthday party with all in attendance receiving a wrapped gift. It was also decided that brown would be the chosen color for the next meeting to be conducted at the home of Geraldine Marsteller, Douglasville.

Thirteen members of Berks Society of Farm Women, Group #1, answered the roll call by trying to recall the name of their first-grade teacher. Among business items discussed was the group's participation in the Heim-fest activities and reservations were made by members to attend the county convention. More definite plans are being put in place for the yard sale at the Friendship Farm Deli. After the business meeting, the hostess read an article on senior citizen driving situations and predicaments and how some of the could be remedied.

Lancaster Society 20

Lancaster Farm Women Society 20 met on Thursday, Oct. 4, at the home of Mary Shirk with Marian Hastings as co-hostess.

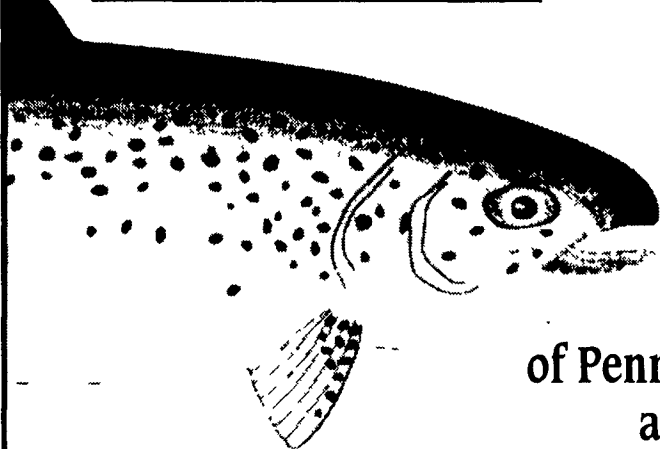

Following the refreshments, Marian read the Scripture, taken from Psalm 1. She had two readings, "Tree with Charm" and "What a Difference a Day Makes." The Lord's Prayer was prayed in unison and The Allegiance to the Flag was used.

There were 16 in attendance.

The president, Nancy Lefever, presided at the business meeting and had several reports to make. Five will be going to the state convention — Nancy Lefever, Marie Foote, Mary Shirk, Anna Mary Groff and Vivian Trout. Marie Foote will be attending the state convention. The Sunshine Committee reported five cards were sent this past month.

For the program, members had a food auction that garnered $76. The November meeting will be at the home of Dorothy Crawford with Pauline Reinhart as co-hostess.

Stream MAPS

of Pennsylvania, New York, Ohio, Michigan and New England (CT, MA, VT, HR, RI)

Why every fisherman and boater needs these maps

It is estimated that 10% of all the anglers catch 90% of the fish. Regardless of which group you fall into — there's a sure way to up your odds — simply try new fishing waters. Fish where few ever fish.

Pennsylvania is loaded with great fishing waters — many of them overlooked. From Lake Erie tributaries to the Delaware River — thousands of miles of streams, lakes and rivers are now easy-to-locate on one map.

Professor Higbee's Stream Map of Pennsylvania is the first and only highly detailed map of its kind.

This 3-foot-by-5-foot color map shows virtually all of the 45,000 miles of Pennsylvania streams plus lakes.

FREE GUIDEBOOK WITH ALL MAPS

A guidebook is included FREE with each state map. It will pinpoint the "select waters" for specific species of fish in each state. Locate STREAM and LAKES both alphabetically and geographically.

The STREAM MAP OF PENNSYLVANIA was completed in 1965 after a thirty-year effort by Howard Higbee, a former Penn State Professor.

The map is known as the LOST STREAM MAP to some anglers.

Professor Higbee succeeded in creating a map of the highest detail possible — a map that shows every stream and lake. He painstakingly plotted by hand the location of 45,000 miles of streams onto a 3x5 map.

The map sold extremely well — until it was lost several years later. Incredibly, the printer entrusted with the original drawing and printing plates declared bankruptcy, then carelessly hauled Higbee's 30 years of work to a landfill.

The few remaining dog-eared copies became a prized possession. Professor Higbee was offered $400 for one of his last maps. And state agencies were forced to keep their copies under lock and key.

Experts told Professor Higbee that reprints were impossible, because the maps were printed in non-photographic blue.

Then, in 1991, at the age of 91, Howard Higbee's dream came true. Computers made it possible to reprint the map. Howard said, "I never thought I'd live to see this day."

RAVE REVIEWS

"It is amazingly detailed and names some creeks in the Mohawk Valley that can't even be found on topographic maps."

- John Pitarres, OBSERVER-DISPATCH- Utica

"If you're looking for the most definitive maps ever created depicting every single creek, river, stream, pond and lake...then 'Professor Higbee's Stream Maps' are without question the finest."

- Howard Brant, THE NEWARK STAR-LEDGER

"It is in showing where to find out-of-the-way trout streams that makes the map such a treasure to the fisherman."

- Joe Gordon, TRIBUNE-DEMOCRAT-Johnstown

POURED SOLID CONCRETE

STORAGE SYSTEM SPECIALISTS

START WITH THE BEST! POURED CONCRETE WALLS

You get about 40% more concrete for your dollar with a poured, solid concrete basement as compared to a hollow core block basement

A poured solid concrete basement weighs about 50 lbs. more per cubic foot! Far denser. What's more, poured solid concrete walls are monolithic - there are no joints!

This is why laboratory tests show poured, solid concrete basements have many times the flexural and compressive strength to withstand the side and down pressures caused by earth, wind water and building loads and the material density to resist water penetration

Best of all thanks to modern and efficient construction techniques poured solid concrete basements are competitively priced

Solid Concrete For:

- Manure Pit Walls
- Hog House Walls
- Barnyard Walls
- Chicken House Walls
- Retaining Walls
- House Foundation Walls
- Silage Pit Walls
- Cistern Walls
- Concrete Decks
- Concrete Pit Tops

Ken and Brenda hold some of their favorite advertising pieces...a Kaffa Calf Food can and several Red Men signs.

A Red Men Lodge charter represents the Red Men fraternal organization, which has a club in Everett. Because he likes Indian memorabilia, Ken is fond of everything connected with Red Men Chewing Tobacco. Sleepy Eye pottery, bottom left, was given as away as premiums in flour sacks. At bottom right are cans from the past.

Advertising Memorabilia Treasured By Kensingers

LINDA WILLIAMS
Bedford Co. Correspondent

BEDFORD (Bedford Co.) — Brenda and Kenneth Kensinger, Martinsburg, have been collecting antiques including skillets, stoneware, and association and advertising memorabilia for many years.

"Actually, Kenneth was collecting antiques before I married him," said Brenda as she unpacks and arranges items in a booth at an antique/collectibles mall known as "Treasures Through Time," located in the county seat of Bedford County.

A clerk at the mall's downstairs counter said the Kensingers have some of the few authentic antiques in the building.

"I have always collected things I like," explained Kenneth. "Stoneware, skillets, and anything with an Indian are among those things."

Unlike many who offer antiques for sale, Kenneth gets most of his items at auctions.

"Skillets are often in bad shape, rusty, greasy, dirty," he explained, so I buy them in soak them lye water for a couple days and clean with a soft wire brush. I finish them up with a coat of Crisco and bake in a warm oven.

His favorite skillets are the Wapak made in the late 1800s. The Wapaks come in 13 sizes numbered two through 14," Ken says. "In all my collecting, I have never seen a two or a 13. A two is rare. Ken has one valued at $750. They must have made more of some numbers than of others. A set of four skillets can sell for as much as $1000."

Another favorite of the Kensingers is the Sleepy Eye Pottery from Minnesota. Extremely heavy and decorated with Indian outlines, the pottery was once given as premiums in flour sacks.

"Sleepy Eye pieces are rare in these parts," Ken says. "I don't know if you find more in shops in Minnesota or nearby states."

The Kensingers' advertising memorabilia takes you backwards through time. An A&P coffee can brings back the aroma of coffee brewing in the old farm house on a cold morning. Red Men chewing tobacco signs and Lucky Strike signs were items popular prior to the days of discovering tobacco's harmful effects.

Remember when your mother baked so much she bought Calumet Baking Powder in a giant sized can or Karo Syrup, popular in babies formula, also came in a large containers.

Ken has several large penny candy jars oozing with nostalgia.

Among the Kensingers' collectibles are old recipe books published by canning jar or food companies. An old premium book from the Bedford County Fair quickly shows the changes that occur over time.

Those in Morrisons Cove will remember Boyd's Grocery Store located on the corner in New Enterprise. It was an old loafing stores with oiled floors and soda pop in a nickel machine. Every Christmas, Orlo, the store owner would give away small items of appreciation to his customers. One of these was a thermometer and the Kensingers have a sample in their collection.

Other thermometers, some with pretty winter scenes, came from G. B. Wineland or Shaffer Farm Equipment.

Rulers, another popular Christmas giveaway, were presented to customers of George W. Williams, Hollidaysburg, or the Lake Shore Seed Company.

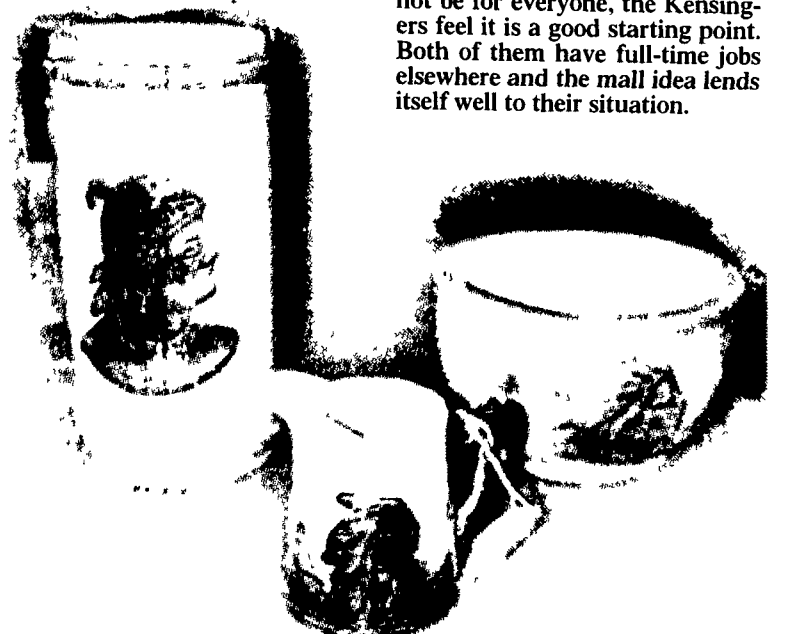

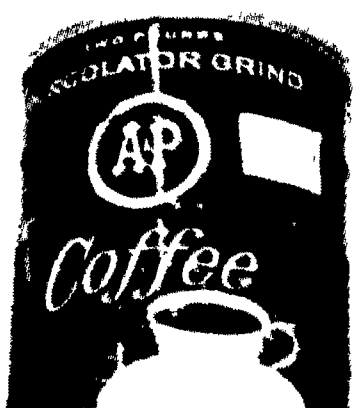

Curry Supply and Hershberger's Garage can't hide their ages. Christmas rulers in the collection reveal their longevity.

Detwiler's Dairy which specialized in Golden Guernsey Milk gave rulers one Christmas as did Leidy's Electric.

Does anyone remember J. Hays Robertson's Ford Sales in the Broad Top area?

Kensinger says advertising items are popular in large old houses, restaurants, or other places of business which might like to decorate with antiques.

While advertising malls might not be for everyone, the Kensingers feel it is a good starting point. Both of them have full-time jobs elsewhere and the mall idea lends itself well to their situation.

Textile Studies Is Subject Of Folklife Symposium By Goschenhoppen

GREEN LANE (Montgomery Co.) — On Nov. 3, 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., the Goschenhoppen Historians will present their second Thomas R. Brendle Folklife Symposium at Red Men's Hall, Green Lane, located at the intersection of Rt. 29 and Rt. 63, about halfway between Philadelphia and Allentown.

This all-day forum will feature four topical speakers, each presenting material based on his continuing research on textiles.

Following the symposium, the Antes house will be open for symposium participants. The four presentations are as follows:

- Julie Powell will speak on textiles, printed and woven, produced for political purposes. Campaign handkerchiefs and banners and badges, flags for specific candidates as well as clothing and quilts re-using these very specifically oriented textile items will be featured.

- Nancy Roan will present elements of her research on early manufactured textiles — names of fabrics long-disappeared from stove shelves, manufacturers, and wearing apparel terminology relating to these old and oddly-named textiles.

- Alan Keyser, Pennsylvania German textile expert and collector of Pennsylvania German folk textiles will discuss Pennsylvania German weavers. The roll of the weaver in folk culture, typical patterns and colors and the uses of these various textiles within the Pennsylvania German folk culture will be covered. Pennsylvania German weavers were skilled tradesmen who produced cloth from home prepared thread and yarn. Anglo areas of settlement saw the loom set up in the home to make true "homespun" cloth.

- Doris and Bill Hoag have taken upon themselves the daunting task of documenting — measuring, analyzing color and pattern, thread count, and recording for computer analysis thousands of samples of locally produced Pennsylvania German linen. They will summarize their project thus far.

Symposium participants are encouraged to bring locally woven checked and striped "homespun" linen fabrics with them for identification and possible inclusion in the documentation survey. Appraisals can not be given at this time.

Participants who have in their personal collection samples of politically related textiles — election handkerchiefs, printed banners with lettering and/or pictures, or, as found in the Goschenhoppen

Quilts Documentation project, a quilt with campaign badge ribbons sewn on it as a part of the "crazy" pattern — may bring these to show to the assemblage.

Registration in advance is necessary in order to provide the "lunch in a 'tut.'" A check made out to Goschenhoppen Historians for $35 and earmarked "Antes Fund" may be mailed to P.O. Box 476, Green Lane, PA 18054. For information, call Nancy and Abe Roan (610) 367-8286.

Kachinas: Dolls With A Serious Purpose

There has been growing collector interest in Kachina dolls made in the Southwest by Hopi and Zuni tribes. When they come to auction, prices are relatively modest ranging from $500 to $2,000.

At a Skinner auction of American Indian and Ethnographic Art, one of the most interesting carved Kachinas depicting an animal-type creature sold for $2,070. It dated to the first quarter of the 20th century and was polychrome painted in bright colors. A Kachina, Zuni, made in the 1940s, in a male form and carved of cottonwood fetched

$1,725. Like all Kachina dolls, they were made in the various likenesses of the supernatural guardians of the Hopi and Zuni.

Until recently, little was known of their history. Not until tourists began popularizing travel to the Southwest in the 1930s was there much interest in collecting or their origins. Tourists who witnessed the Kachina ceremonies, with adult males representing Kachinas in song and dance wanted souvenirs. The small dolls, from eight inches to sometimes 22 inches began to be collected.

At about the same time anthropologists began studying the dolls, learning what they could from the Hopi. Among the things they learned is that the Kachina was given to little girls, carved by their biological father, as one of their first objects with spiritual importance. As infants they receive several flat dolls, with featureless heads. One of these, not identified as an "infant doll" sold at the Skinner auction for $517.

As the child grows, the dolls or "tihu" become more realistic and detailed. By the time she is in her teens, she no longer receives dolls for good behavior. Supposedly, her rewards will be in the form of prosperity, health, etcetera.

The dolls were thought to possess a part of the Kachinas' spiritual powers. As such, they were believed to be unseen spirits who appeared in the actual world as plants, birds, animals and clouds. Wolves and eagles were popular. There are hunter and guard Kachinas, warriors and mud head clowns among the many forms. One of the oldest types is the buffalo Kachina. The costumes were made of buffalo hide, with and without the wool. They were topped with a large, wooden buffalo head. Other times Kachinas represented neighboring tribes.

Though dolls have been discovered dating to the early 19th century, examples of their likenesses have been found on Kiva murals and ancient pottery dating to the late 1300s.

Clues: The first Kachina dolls were very primitive and similar to the flat infant dolls still being made. The simple body design had three red vertical lines on a white background. Fingers were painted on and headdresses were pieced together. They were made from the cottonwood root. Paints were made from mineral pigments.

By the 1930s, 40s, carved figures were made to meet the growing interest by tourists. Fingers were carved, headdresses were elaborately carved and painted. Garments were made of cloth and leather. Feathers were used for headpieces. Belts and sashes were painted rather than of materials. Watercolors were used.

Contemporary Kachinas are often decorated with acrylics. And, many of today's carvers create sculptured Kachinas that rely on the natural form of the cottonwood root and the look of the graining. Other new Kachinas are working in the old turn-of-the-century style, using the tools of that time.

Match A Spreader To Your Needs

Without Spreading Yourself Too Thin

Get Unmatched Flexibility At A Great Price.

With eight sizes to choose from and a wide variety of options it's easy to see how the New Idea® 3700 Series Spreaders meet the needs of any operation. Their aggressive main beater paddles are strategically spaced and angled to shred a wide range of material while giving you a consistent spread pattern.

Culvert-grade galvanizing over one-piece, copper-bearing steel sides provide a barrier against rust and corrosion. And for hauling long distances, the truck-mount option proves to be the safest, most economical way to transport large amounts of material.

To see how simple it is to customize your spreading operation, contact your AGCO® New Idea dealer today. You'll be surprised how much time and money you'll save with the New Idea 3700 Series Spreaders.

Hooper - 4WD Headquarters for 25 Years

Hooper introduced Steiger 4WD tractors to Pennsylvania in 1975. Since then, Eastern farmers have reaped the benefits of Steiger's increased productivity, and Hooper's knowledge of power to ground mechanics.

Hooper Technicians are 4WD Experts

For over 25 years Hooper technicians have specialized in servicing and supporting 4WD tractors. Hooper technicians have seen it all, and they know how to make 4WD tractors operate at maximum performance and productivity.

"The big advantage of the Quadtrac is that you are getting traction and flotation all in one package and you really put the horsepower to the ground. It has a lot of the comforts of the operator in mind too. That's probably what sold me on it, knowing that my people will want to put the long hours in it because when they come out, they feel like they have just been riding in a car all day. The service and reputation of Hooper is what makes the whole package- the tractor itself is good, but you have to have good people that stand behind it."

"We've had our MX 240 Magnum for about a year and we've had no problems with it. You can plant all day long and it doesn't wear you out - it's a real comfortable tractor, it has a nice roomy cab and is very operator friendly. The Magnum has plenty of power and I really like it a lot, but the service was the big reason we bought that MX 240 from Hoover. They work with you any way they can and they are really nice people."

"We just bought a Case IH 2388 at the start of the season and it's such a simple machine that saves us a lot of time and hours in the field. I wasn't sure if I wanted to trade in my 1688 because I liked it so much, but the waiver of finance made the decision pretty easy. Hooper always tries to find the best way to finance things economically and with the interest rates being what they are, it's a really good time to help the economy and update. The reason we have a red combine is probably because of Hooper's unbelievable service. Not only are they excellent mechanics, but they really try hard for their customers and they are wonderful people - we appreciate that."

Jack Weinhofer ~ Weinhofer Farms, Whitehall, PA

Hooper has an excellent selection of 2100 and 2300 series combines in stock and ready for delivery.

TMR "Total Mix" Mixer Feeders

"Total Mix" TMR mixer feeders let you mix more long-stemmed hay into your ration - up to 30% by weight depending on hay type and moisture content

- "Hay - slicer auger" - Incorporates knife assemblies into the two bottom augers
- Better mixing action - Four-auger design creates a double figure - 8 mixing pattern for fast and complete mixing of all feed ingredients
- Energy efficient - Planetary drive system requires less horsepower.
- Built to last - Patented star couplers absorb shock loads by allowing the bottom augers to flex, providing long service life
- Five sizes - 150 to 455 cubic feet capacities

High-quality CLAAS® equipment satisfies your need for high-quality silage

CLAAS knows your need for nutrient-rich silage so we offer technologically advanced, heavy-duty fixed chamber round balers and variable chamber round balers that produce perfectly formed, uniform, dense bales. Both models are available with ROLLATEX® net wrap or twine and the optional, efficient ROTO CUT® cutting system that pre-processes silage and adds greater density to every bale. Check our durable disk mower conditioners with a 9'9" cutting width. They follow ground contours for a clean, even cut. Discover reliable, heavy-duty tedders, available in 18' to 33' models, to accelerate dry down. And don't overlook our dependable, heavy-duty rotary rakes with tandem axles that adjust to uneven ground conditions to produce uniform, fluffy windrows. CLAAS can meet all your silage needs regardless of the size of your operation.

Timing And Efficiency Critical To Forage Harvest

LENEXA, Kan. — Milklines and black layers and silk dates and moisture content measurements — for every forage producer, it seems, there's a different method of determining the perfect harvest date.

While some methods by themselves may be more accurate than other methods by themselves, agronomists and dairy nutritionists have come to agree that a combination of infield observation and more scientific measurements gives producers the most accurate indicator of optimal harvest date.

"Right after hybrid selection, harvest timing is one of the most important management decisions a forage producer makes," said Dr. Joe Lauer, extension corn agronomist, University of Wisconsin. "The most astute operators understand that a lot of money can be made, that you can turn around and profit from improved management through increased milk production."

To that end, Lauer said, any and every tool available to the producer should be used to help pin down a date. Though the consequences of inaccurate prediction may not prove disastrous, the better you do at timing the harvest, the more nutrients will be preserved in the cut forage.

The most basic prediction of anticipated harvest date can be made as soon as the crop goes in the ground.

"You can get a general idea just by noting the planting date and the maturity of your hybrid," said Lauer. "Then, you can use that information to inform your custom harvester of the potential harvest date." Once the crop is off and running, agronomic signals can help growers predict a more accurate maturity date.

"The next important indicator of how a field is maturing is the silking date," Lauer says. "Generally, the period from silk to 50 percent kernel milkline is the same, regardless of the hybrid: about 42 to 47 days."

Once the milkline starts to move, it's time for more scientific measurements, such as a whole-plant moisture content analysis. Though there are several methods for obtaining this measurement, Lauer and his colleagues agree that, whatever the method, it's critical to have a stable endpoint weight before calculating dry matter content.

The more accepted methods of drying a sample, particularly in a microwave or conventional oven, often lead to over-estimation of the dry matter content. A more accurate measurement, he says, may be determined by a commercial testing service using near infrared analysis.

After the milkline is moving and a moisture content is established, it's just a matter of calculating drydown rate and counting down the days until the crop reaches optimal moisture level. In Wisconsin, for example, producers use an average drydown rate of about a half percent per day.

Growers in different climates may use that figure as a starting point, then adjust the rate based on local conditions—slower for more humid areas like the south and southeast, faster for warm, dry regions.

"What you're doing in the period right before harvest is fine-tuning the harvest date," said Lauer. "Numerous management decisions need to be made to produce high-yield, high-quality silage. But if the crop can't be cut at the right time, then stored at the proper moisture for adequate fermentation, all those decisions will have been for nothing."

After a harvest date is determined, growers should be concerned with just one thing: getting the crop cut and in storage as quickly as possible. Here's where the efficiency and capacity of your or your custom chopper's harvesting equipment comes into play.

"Every day you lose, you lose weight and quality," said Tim Meister, division marketing manager, John Deere Ottumwa Works. "That's why you and your crew need to work efficiently; or, if you're using a custom harvester, facilitate their operation in any way possible."

"If you're using a custom harvester, make sure you've got people on hand to help that crew however they can. Clear as many obstacles as you can from the fields to be harvested—old fence posts, irrigation pipe, anything that slows down the operation. It sounds simple, but we hear stories every year about harvester damage that could have been avoided."

If you're harvesting the crop yourself, Meister said, make sure your equipment is in top condition, and is able to handle the yields you expect in a timely, efficient manner.

"John Deere recently commissioned independent tests in Europe to compare the efficiency of our self-propelled forage harvesters with our main competitors," Meister said. "Those results are good news for growers and custom harvesters using or considering the purchase of John Deere forage harvesting equipment."

The Independent National Farm Mechanization Institute in Hungary put two machines to work: the John Deere 6850 and the Claas 840. Without the kernel processor, the Deere produced between 13 percent and 14 percent higher specific output, depending on chop length, than the Claas. Moreover, the Deere used less fuel per ton of crop cut than the Claas. The differences were similar when the kernel processor was used.

"The work on a dairy farm never stops," says Meister. "So producers or contract harvesters need to be able to get in and get out as quickly and efficiently as possible."

Which, said Lauer, all goes back to accurate timing of the harvest. "As the machines get larger and growers or their custom harvesters are covering more acres," he says, "timing and scheduling of the harvest will become even more critical."

Protein May Hold Key For Vaccine Development Of Pathogen

WOOSTER, Ohio - Ohio State University researchers are hoping that a protein in a food-borne pathogen may lead to vaccine development in its common host - chickens.

Qijing Zhang, a researcher with the university's Food Animal Health Research Program, has been awarded a three-year U.S. Department of Agriculture grant to study the "major outer membrane protein" of Campylobacter jejuni, a bacterium that harmlessly resides in birds, including poultry. However, the pathogen can produce campylobacteriosis in humans, a gastrointestinal illness similar to Salmonella and E. coli.

"Campylobacter is the number one food-borne pathogen in the U.S. in terms of number of incidents each year," said Zhang. In addition to its high prevalence in birds, this pathogen has become increasingly resistant to antibiotics used to treat human illnesses, posing another challenge for controlling Campylobacter diseases. Several studies have estimated that 80-100 percent of broiler chicken carcasses are contaminated with Campylobacter.

Last year, OSU researchers discovered the Campylobacter gene encoding the "major outer membrane protein," a protein that maintains the structural integrity of the pathogen and helps it adapt to the gut of its host. Zhang and his associates speculated that the protein could be used to develop vaccines because this protein is produced in large quantities in every Campylobacter strain.

"Also, every strain appears to have a unique protein sequence," said Zhang. "If this is found to be true, we can use the protein sequence as a marker to differentiate various strains of Campylobacter. We can also identify the specific regions of the protein that can induce protective immunity to Campylobacter infections." Researchers are currently testing 150 Campylobacter strains.

According to the Centers for Disease Control, an estimated

2.1 to 2.4 million cases of campylobacteriosis occur in each year, making it the most common food-borne bacterial pathogen in the United States. Symptoms include fever, abdominal cramps and diarrhea. People most commonly contract campylobacteriosis by mishandling raw chicken, eating undercooked chicken, or drinking contaminated water or milk.

Farm Service Agency Seeks County Committee Candidates

POTTSVILLE (Schuylkill Co.) — The Farm Service Agency (FSA) is looking for candidates for the farmer-elected county committee election to be conducted this fall. The election will take place in North Union, Union, East Union, Mahanoy, West Mahanoy, Kline, Rush, Ryan, Rahn, West Penn, and East Brunswick townships.

"It is crucial that every eligible agricultural producer from this area take part in this election because county committees are a direct link between the farm community and the U.S. Department of Agriculture," says Terry Stehr, Schuylkill County executive director. "The county committee system needs everyone to get involved — from voters to committee candidates. Almost anyone eligible to take part in a local FSA program may be a candidate for the committee."

Nomination forms can be obtained from FSA county offices. Completed nomination forms are due back to the FSA office by Oct. 29. FSA will notify nominees and mail election ballots to eligible voters in mid-November. Completed ballots must be returned to FSA offices and postmarked by Dec. 3. Elected members and alternates will take office Jan. 1, 2002.

FSA county committees make decisions on: commodity price support loans and payments; establishment of allotments, yields and marketing quotas; farmer loans; and conservation programs; incentive, indemnity, and disaster payments for some commodities; and other farm disaster assistance.

"The county committee is an important part of the service delivery of the USDA. We'd like to include more farmers in non-traditional operations and people whose livelihoods depend on farming," said Stehr. "We're also looking for small farmers, specialty crop farmers, truck farmers, and spouses or business partners — anyone who would be able to add some new or different experiences to their local county committee."

For more information, contact your local USDA Farm Service Agency office at (570) 622-1555.

"We Like The Consistency of the Mix"
- Nelson & Dennis Weaver, Weaver Homestead Dairy

"Our Roto-Mix mixer from Lapps Barn Equipment processes baled hay just the way it needs to be done. It gives a nice coarse mix, with average stem length 2" to 4"—ration passes the particle size test with flying colors. Processed hay almost never wraps around the augers in our Weaverline feed cart.

"We purchased the Roto-Mix 414 in 1998. It has been reliable and trouble free."

Waterbeds for Cows

10 Year
Limited
Warranty

ALANTA™

A Division of the LinPoly Group of Companies
Forest Park, Georgia

The ALANTA Waterbed for cows is a revolutionary product, comfortable, safe and hygienic. It clearly improves your cows' well-being and therefore promotes higher milk production. It is the ultimate stall floor covering for the modern, animal-friendly dairy farm.

WELL MADE

The ALANTA Waterbed is made of two rubber layers with a water-filled compartment in between. GD-Enerka gives a 10-year guarantee.

COMFORTABLE

The waterbed molds itself to the cow's shape. It's cool in summer and pleasantly warm in winter.

SAFE

Thanks to the non-slip rubber upper surface, the cow is gripped firmly and cannot slip off. In this way the ALANTA waterbed keeps damage to hooves to a minimum.

BEEF TIPS

Studies suggest cause of learning disability

New studies are showing that children with math learning problems have a deficiency of iron and zinc. Studies in this area are being done by researchers such as Dr. Nancy Krebs of the University of Colorado School of Medicine. "Lean beef is a good thing to offer children, a good source of nutrients that they need," she advises.

Simmental beef cattle have long been known for high growth and high cutability or lean meat. Lean meat can be ordered special from your butcher or purchased as custom meat from your local Simmental or Simmental-influenced farm or ranch. Call for a FREE directory and map of ALL Simmental breeders in your area. Courtesy of:
